

Drab Argentine Politico May Campaign For Prexy

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Ricardo Balbin, a colorless political veteran, is Argentina's new man of the hour and a likely presidential candidate again in 1964. Balbin's People's Radical party soundly trounced President Arturo Frondizi's Intransigent Radicals in the midterm congressional elections Sunday. Frondizi came out with a small majority in the House of Deputies, thanks to holdovers who were not up for re-election, but the government party's popular votes was swamped by vote for Balbin's forces and the blank ballots cast by adherents of the outlaw Peronist and Communist parties. Balbin, eyes glittering behind rimless glasses, says he is not too happy about the victory—with more campaign funds and less government interference, his party could have done better. Balbin, 55, is the father of three children, a longtime foe of ex-dictator Juan Peron and a former friend of Frondizi. Balbin was the old Radical party's presidential candidate and Frondizi his running mate in 1951. Peron beat them soundly. Internal differences split the Radicals in 1956. There have been reports that the two factions might reunite, for Peronism remains a constant threat. More blank ballots were cast in the congressional elections than for either of the Radical groups. Balbin in a post-election interview was silent on prospects for reunion. He said the election results were a reaction against an "unpopular economic program," the belt-tightening austerity Frondizi launched in December 1958. Balbin said the program runs counter to what Frondizi and his party offered in the 1958 presidential race. Both Frondizi and Economic Minister Alvaro Alsogaray have said the election results would not change the economic policy. The economic program "has brought about a real burden for the people," Balbin declared, and should be changed to pacify the country.

Strong Streams Of Water Turned On Negro Group

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Powerful streams of water from fire hoses churned into a group of several hundred young Texas Negroes. A thousand others chanting the Lord's Prayer paraded through the streets to Louisiana's 34-story state capital at Baton Rouge for a protest assembly. Those were major developments Wednesday in the unfolding campaign of the South's Negro youth to obtain service at lunch counters traditionally reserved for white patrons. The fire hoses went into play at Marshall, a town of 20,000 in the East Texas oil and farming region, to break up an assemblage at the courthouse square protesting lunch counter incidents which had brought arrests. The incidents started as Negroes tried for the third time in a week to patronize lunch counters. Police made 55 arrests for unlawful assembly, then took into custody 200 more who gathered at the courthouse singing the "Star Spangled Banner," "God Bless America" and similar songs. The crowd re-formed faster than it could be thinned by arrests, at one time pressing forward to the courthouse steps only to be warned by the district attorney. When officers started freeing those who had been taken into custody and they joined the crowd outside, firemen turned loose the hoses. Order was restored. Shortly after the 1,900 students of Southern University, Negro state college and supporters staged their rally on the capital grounds at Baton Rouge, the university announced the ousting of

Fire Damage Set At $450,000

MEDFORD (AP) — Damage is estimated at $450,000 in a fire that destroyed the Faber's Farms Supply Co. building here. The Tuesday night blaze was blamed tentatively on an electrical failure. The fire burned a cable, knocking out service to some 900 telephone users and caused a brief power failure. The building housed the feed, fuel and warehouse business of Everett A. and Donald Faber of Central Point, and the Rogue Valley Beverage Co. operated by Stan Kalapus of Medford.

Different Type Summit Eyed By Chief Executive

Editor's Note: At his news conference Wednesday, President Eisenhower expressed some ideas on how to accomplish things at a summit conference. John M. Highower, veteran AP reporter who covered the 1955 Geneva summit meeting and various other international conferences, discusses these ideas in the following interpretive article.
By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower is looking forward to a different kind of summit conference at Paris next May. He wants some sessions to provide for strictly private conversations among himself, Prime Minister Harold Macmillan of Britain, French President Charles de Gaulle and Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev. The President's interest in getting the Big Four to "explore each other's minds" emerged at his news conference Wednesday. His statements to reporters also developed another intriguing prospect for the future. The Eisenhower administration seems destined to become increasingly in its closing months a kind of caretaker government, Eisenhower did not use any such term as that but in replying to a question about the possibility of a second summit conference late this year, he noted that more and more questions would arise about his ability to make commitments running beyond the end of his term next January. At the same time, however, he left no doubt that if a crisis should arise he intends to take whatever measures are necessary to meet it. Whether the President has already discussed with others of the Big Four his ideas about the nature of the talks to be held at Paris was not clear. But it seemed almost certain that this had been one of the many matters he discussed with Macmillan at Camp David early this week. Macmillan left Washington Wednesday night. During the summit conference at Paris and Eisenhower's subsequent visit to Moscow in June, major attention especially abroad will still be focused on Eisenhower, however strong his own sense of limitation in dealing with the future may be. But Eisenhower's own concept probably means that at the Paris conference he will be looking for ways to solve only the more immediate East-West problems and in such a way that there would be little doubt of his successor's interest in carrying on. Whether from a practical point of view there are such possibilities, with respect to the long deadlocked issues of German reunification, the future of West Berlin and the major problems of disarmament, is a serious question which only the four men at the summit can answer. It seems likely that another effect of the terminal date on the President's powers may be to inhibit the administration from embarking on any bold new course or trying any fundamentally new initiative in negotiations with the Soviet Union. The last summit conference was held at Geneva in 1955. At that time Eisenhower could see a long time ahead in which to carry out his plans and commitments. It was there that he proposed the open skies plan for mutual aerial inspection of the two great powers. Nothing came of it but if the Soviet Union had accepted the idea on the spot Eisenhower would have been able to see it into operation. The meetings at Geneva were larger than those the President would like to see at least on some occasions at Paris. While the leaders of the United States, Britain, France and the Soviet Union met informally at Geneva and sometimes talked casually over a drink, their business discussions were all held in the presence of at least some of their advisers. Eisenhower deplored this kind of arrangement Wednesday, saying that when the meetings are held in a room crowded with people the four leaders are "talking at everybody else, instead of talking with them... they are talking to their own constituents... doing as good a propaganda job as they can." What he prefers is "four men sitting around the table with their interpreters and, without anybody having any checks of any kind, (trying to) see if they can, by exploring each other's minds (find out) 'what do you really want to do? what could we do?'" One speculation is that this kind of a meeting will in fact be arranged by De Gaulle who is also understood to favor small private sessions of the Big Four. He may take Eisenhower, Macmillan and Khrushchev to his chateau at Rambouillet, many miles outside Paris, for a part of the meeting at the summit. Whether in the end the four men will go without their foreign min-
