Aid Program Snipped $136 Millions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Foreign Affairs Committee has cut $136 million dollars from President Eisenhower's foreign aid program.

Although the reductions in the first round skirmish were comparatively small for the $4,175,000,000 program, the big test lies ahead when the Appropriations Committee passes on the actual money bill.

Carry-over congressional authorizations from last year cover two billion dollars in military aid and about 700 million dollars in long-term, low-interest loans through the Development Loan Fund. So only about one-third the total — $1,400,000,000 — was under consideration by the Foreign Affairs Committee.

The biggest single cut was 75 million dollars slashed from the 175 million dollars Eisenhower asked for a contingency fund at his disposal. A total of 100 million was voted last year for this reserve.

The committee also voted to abolish aid to Cuba unless Eisenhower specifically directs that it be continued. Cuba gets no arms aid now, and the action would apply only to proposed technical assistance totaling about $30,000.

Congressional sentiment for cutting off aid to Cuba has built up as Cuban Prime Minister Fidel Castro continued his denunciations of the United States.

Chairman Otto E. Passman (D-La.) of the House Appropriations Subcommittee has sent letters to all House members urging them to join in an effort to cut foreign spending. He has said the President's requests should be cut by more than a billion dollars.

Wooden Cross Burned On Lot

It was the second time in three days a cross had been burned on Detroit's East Side.

The cross, slightly less than three feet high, was burned next to Elsie Simpson's home. Mrs. Simpson, 55, said she had lived in her home for about 35 years without any trouble.

Another cross was burned Tuesday night in the backyard of a vacant house about two miles from Mrs. Simpson's.

The cross was burned in the backyard of a home being sold to Negroes. The neighborhood mostly is white.

Film Chiefs Hit By Guild

HOLLYWOOD (UP) — The Screen Actors Guild (SAG) today accused "ever-absent" presidents of major motion picture companies for delaying settlement of the 26-day actors' strike.

John L. Dales, national executive secretary of SAG, blasted the studios after they suddenly called off for the second day in a row negotiations Thursday that were expected to lead to a settlement. The studios said, however, they needed time to study the economic implications of terms sought by SAG.

No new date for meetings between the groups was set.

"A shocking development has occurred in the conduct of the producer - Screen Actors Guild negotiations," said Dales in a prepared statement.

"For the second time this week what was hoped would be a final negotiation meeting leading to settlement of the strike."

1960 Census Commences With Door-Door Quiz

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 1960 census army was on the march today, asking questions about the Dwight D. Eisenhowers and the John Smiths. The door-to-door canvass, a vast undertaking that is attempted only once in 10 years, will continue until census workers personally visit each of the 55 million households in the United States.

Washington's most fashionable residence, the White House, was one of the first stops on the schedule. Census Director Robert H. Burgess and the district census supervisor, Louis J. Alexis, were given an early appointment to collect from President Eisenhower the census information about the first family. Alexis and Burgess spent five minutes with the President. According to Census Bureau estimates, this is about as long as the census taker's visit should last at any home.

Like most Americans, the Eisenhowers prepared their census report in advance, jotting down the information on a questionnaire delivered last week by the Post Office Department.

This is a time-saving innovation of this year's census. It means the census taker merely has to copy down the data onto forms of his own. He doesn't have to ask questions.

Only three persons are considered residents of the White House: Mr. and Mrs. Eisenhower and Rose Wood, the first lady's maid.

The 1960 census is the biggest and costliest ever. To count about 180 million Americans and make a detailed study of the way they live and work, the Census Bureau is spending an estimated 118 million dollars.

In the 1950 census, 151 million people were counted at a cost of 90 million dollars.

The Census Bureau maintains a running estimate of the total population on a counting device in the Commerce Department lobby. The estimate as of 8 a.m. today was 174,921,434.

How close this is to the final census figure won't be known until some time this fall. White preliminary population totals for communities will be given out locally starting late this month, state totals won't be published until after the summer.

The Constitution requires a census every 10 years. The basic purpose is to decide how many seats each state shall have in the House of Representatives, based on population. The prospective realignment of seats under the 1960 census will be announced before Sept. 1 but won't take effect until January 1962, when the Congress elected in 1962 takes office. The Eisenhowers, like three fourths of all families, had to answer only 10 basic census questions. However, more detailed information is being sought at every fourth household.

The one family in four which gets the full treatment usually is handed a special questionnaire when the census taker calls. These are to be filled out and returned by mail. In sparsely settled sections, however, the additional data will be collected through personal interviews.

Altogether, about 180,000 Americans have temporary jobs helping to take the census. The average enumerator, the official name for census taker, will earn about $12 a day on a piecework basis. Each can be identified by his red, white and blue badge and the special portfolio he carries.

The scope of the operation is indicated by the fact that one in every 1,000 Americans has a census job.

Another measure of the task. The final results will fill 100,000 pages in more than 100 bound volumes.

An embassy spokesman said Chou would visit Rangoon April 16-19 before coming here to hold talks with Indian Premier Jawaharlal Nehru on Chinese-Indian border disputes.
