

Range Seeder Ready For Western Use

A special grass seeder that may revolutionize seeding on rough range lands and cut-over forest lands has been released by the Oregon State College agricultural experiment station for commercial use.

Further development of the new-type seeder so it can be used on a wider variety of range and forest lands was recommended at a recent meeting of the Inter-Agency Range Seeding Equipment Committee, reports Dean E. Booster, OSC agricultural engineer. The committee is made up of representatives from the Bureau of Land Management, U.S. Forest Service, Bureau of Indian Affairs, USDA Agricultural Research Service and other governmental agencies.

The seeder will now be sent to the Arcadia Equipment Development Center of the U.S. Forest Service, Arcadia, Calif., Booster said. There, it will undergo further development so it can be used on range and forest lands of the 11 western states.

The special grass seeder, known as Desert Flower IV, was invented by Booster using principles developed by D. N. Hyder and F. A. periment station near Burns. The Sneva, range researchers at the sturdy new machine is able to Squaw Butte-Harney branch ex-seed in rough land covered with brush, stubble and rocks.

Before seeding with the new machine, brush on land needs to be killed by plowing or disking. Booster said. The wide wheels on the seeder use its great weight to pack the soil to make a firm seed bed, and at the same time open small seed furrows in the packed soil. Seed is dropped in the furrows, and covered with loose soil by heavy drag links.
