

LUCKY LADY DRIVER

a minor accident involving a woman motorist: "Due to the heat and her wailing infant, etc., forgot to issue a summons for failure to produce operator's license."

NAIL-SHAPED SPICE

Greek House Rules Cut

OREGON STATE COLLEGE — A survey of the 48 national fraternities and sororities having chapters at Oregon State College shows that progress has been made since World War II in the removal of restrictive membership clauses.

Dan W. Poling, OSC dean of men, said that of the 48 nationally-affiliated living groups, only eight still have restrictive membership clauses. Eight years ago, 15 of the then 46 groups had restrictive clauses.

This January, the Oregon State Board of Higher Education said national organizations whose charters contain express sanctions for racial and religious discrimination are unacceptable. Although a deadline for removal of racial and religious clauses has not been set, the board did ask for a progress report in two years.

Dr. A. L. Strand, OSC's preship-

dent, said that for the "college to fix a deadline when all restrictive membership clauses must be removed, would be resorting to a stern measure that might necessitate court action."

"We would like to avoid any extreme measure," Dr. Strand continued. "The progress that has been made during the last 10 years indicates that all of our living groups will have removed restrictive clauses before very long."

Since 1947, OSC student governing bodies have encouraged living groups to remove restrictive membership requirements. At national conventions, Dr. Strand said, active members of the OSC living groups are "putting pressure" on their national officers and are speaking for removal of membership restrictions.

Many OSC fraternities have had representatives of minority groups as full-fledged members for many years, Dean Poling reported. OSC's administration does not grant recognition or approval for the establishment of any new student organization which discriminates on the basis of race, color, creed or national origin.

The value of the property owned and operated by 31 fraternities, 16 sororities (one sorority rents a house) and three cooperatives at Oregon State is valued at $4,951,790. These properties house approximately 2,250 students.

If the state were to furnish standard housing for them, the total cost, not including land, would be well over six million dollars, Poling said.
