

All Types Of Info Asked Of Oregon State Library

SALEM — Oregonians in their quest for knowledge ask the Oregon State Library for every kind of information. Requests for information and assistance come daily from government officials, state institutions, public, school and college libraries and from individuals from all over the state.

Questions range from mineral laws and how to file a claim, to queries on building Bavarian-styled houses and the newest books on farm management.

A neighbor wants help in teaching English to immigrants who would like to become citizens. A state official seeks information on types of facilities in other states for control of psychotic criminals. Another individual wants to know the requirements for a course in the work of laboratory technician.

There are letters from the friends and the parents of the handicapped and from the aging.

"Now confined by old age and ill health to my home in this little ghost town, I would again like to borrow some books."

"A problem of a handicapped boy who is unable to attend school. Shut away from school life and getting more depressed and turned inward. Could you send him books about his two interests, dogs and clocks, and also books of biography that show men of great value to the world have

Department Lists Drop In World Wheat Surplus

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The still the second highest on record and 18 per cent above the 1950-54 average.

The department also said record-breaking crops of corn, cotton, coffee, and cocoa have been or will be harvested for the 1959-60 season. And despite the prospect of record consumption of feed grains, the world surplus of these crops are rising.

The department predicted American feed grains exports would total about 12,000,000 metric tons for the year ending June 30, up about 10 per cent from the previous fiscal year.

But it warned the rate of increase, which nearly doubled since fiscal 1956-57, appeared to be slowing because of increased production in Europe and more competition from the Southern Hemisphere and the Middle East. In the 1960-61 season, however, drought in those regions may reduce their production.

Tobacco exports from Rhodesia, a major competitor of American growers in foreign markets, set a record in 1959.

The Agriculture Department reported Rhodesian blue-cured tobacco exports last year amounted to 149,000,000 pounds — up 27 per cent from 1958 and 7 per cent above the previous record high in 1955.

The department soon will announce plans for using about 11,000,000 pounds of caponette chickens after they were voluntarily taken off the market by producers and food stores. That action was taken at the request of Welfare Secretary Arthur S. Flemming who said the birds contained traces of a cancer-causing chemical called stilbestrol.

The purchase program ended on January 31. Since then the department has kept the birds in cold storage, trying to work out a method of using them.

The Food and Drug Administration has said that the stilbestrol residues in the chickens are concentrated in the skin, liver, and kidneys — and if these parts were removed, the rest of the meat would be perfectly safe.

The House and Senate have disagreed on the best method of handling the financing of the school milk subsidy program. A conference committee from the two chambers will be appointed soon to compromise the dispute.

The Senate last week passed a bill authorizing $84,000,000 for the program in the current fiscal year, a four million dollar increase over the present authorization. For all future years, the Senate bill authorized $95,000,000 annually.

A House-passed measure also set the current fiscal year figure at $84,000,000 — but for the next year the House bill provided an authorization for $100,000,000.

Meet Slated By Rotarians

TULELAKE — A number of Rotarians from Tulelake plan to attend the annual conference of the 516th district of Rotary International from April 7 to April 10 in Redding. Ralph Faussett, president of the local Rotary Club, announced.

Representatives from the 51 other Rotary Clubs in the area from Berkeley to the Oregon border, which make up the district, also will attend. This meeting is held each year. President Faussett said, to review Rotary service activities and to make plans for increasing their effectiveness during the coming year.

An address of welcome by George Fleharty, Redding mayor, will open the session at 1 p.m. Friday, April 8. Saturday night, April 9, will mark the "Goodtime" highlight of the conference with a fellowship hour and the governor's banquet and ball. Final session of the conference will be the demonstration breakfast Sunday morning, April 10.

Local Rotarians who will attend the district conference are: George Myers, William Whitaker, Ed Greene, William Ganger, Ralph Faussett, Ernest Lindsay, C. A. Boyden and Maury Strantz.

Tax Service Cracks Down

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Internal Revenue Service has officially adopted tougher income tax regulations to reduce expense account tax cheating by corporations, businessmen and employees.

Starting next year the IRS will require more information on businesses' tax returns about expense account allowances. Its object is to crack down on two kinds of tax gyps:

— Excessive deductions for entertainment and other expenses which do not qualify as "ordinary and necessary" business outlays.

— Failure of taxpayers to report as income generous expense account allowances, vacations and other things of value from an employer which are really part of the taxpayer's salary.

Internal Revenue Commissioner Dana Latham first proposed the more detailed reporting and announced the crackdown on expense account tax dodges last Dec. 29. He made final Sunday night, the regulations were changed only in minor ways.

Rackets Group Reviews 3 Years Of Investigation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate rackets committee, reviewing three stormy years of investigation, figures the taxpayers got their two million dollars' worth.

Looking back on its revelations of scandals in the labor-management relations field, the committee claims credit for:

1. Enactment of the new anti-corruption labor law.
2. The downfall of former Teamsters Union President Dave Beck.
3. A long string of federal and state indictments of labor racketeers and others.
4. The ousting of a Tennessee judge for allegedly taking payoffs to fix a case before him.

But the committee headed by Sen. John L. McClellan (D-Ark.) has missed fire up to now on its prime objective—to knock out James R. Hoffa, who succeeded Beck in the Teamsters presidency.

Hoffa has won acquittal in two federal court trials since 1957. The committee denounced him year after year as an ally of the nation's most vicious and notorious gangsters, a betrayer of his own union members through payoff deals with employers, a disgrace to the labor movement, and a man whose word is unworthy of belief.

Hoffa has rolled with the punches. He claims he and his union are stronger today than when the AFL-CIO expelled them for alleged corruption.

Before its authority expired last Thursday, the committee said in a final report that Hoffa's fate now is up to the courts, the executive branch of government, and the rank and file teamsters.

McClellan wants the committee to continue for 10 months, to clean up some loose ends. The request still is hanging fire.

The rackets committee was created by the Senate as an eight-man, bipartisan group to explore the need for legislation to combat labor racketeering.

The probe started out with a splash. The committee alleged top teamsters officials had schemed with Seattle mobsters to take over the vice rackets in Portland, Ore.

In its final report, the committee said William Langley, the Portland (Multnomah County) district attorney, was forced out of office and faced with disbarment as a sequel to its disclosures.

The committee listed among its big achievements the indictment of Beck, now under prison sentence for alleged huge thefts of Teamsters funds, and the removal of Schoolfield, took payoffs to fix the Haulston Schoolfield. It charged criminal charges against teamsters in the office of Tennessee Judge Stern.
