

Talk Club Meet Set

A workshop on the topic "Let's Hear Ourselves as Others Hear Us" will be conducted at the regular meeting of Mt. Mazama Toastmistress Club Thursday, April 14, at 6:30 p.m. in the Willard Hotel.

In a toastmistress workshop, members learn by doing. It differs from other discussion meetings in that its purpose is not stimulation of thinking and correlation of ideas, but application of principles already established.

Eva Morey will present the opening for Thursday's meeting. Reba Martz will be timer. Toastmistress will be Della Baty. Virginia Fuller will evaluate the entire meeting and Eva Cook, table topics. Eva Cook will also conduct the education feature.

Topicmistress will be Eunice Rummel and Isabel Sanders will act as toastmistress. Dorothy Neet, Evelyn Natale and Inez Lambert will present various portions of the program.

Members are asked to prepare short Easter poems for introductions.

Story of the Pony Express (5)

The Pony Express began auspiciously, but only a month later, it was nearly destroyed.

More than two-thirds of the so-called "suicide" route lay through hostile Indian country. Sioux, Cheyenne, Shoshones, Arapahoes all resented this intrusion of their lands. Riders had been instructed never to stop and fight but to rely on their swifter horses.

In May, 1860, however, the Paiutes (or Pah-Utes) went on the warpath in Utah and Nevada, burning many stations and stealing stock. Riders arrived at stations only to find them demolished, leaving them no alternative but to go on to the next.

One of the most famous riders, "Pony Bob" Haslam, was forced to make a round trip of 380 miles in 36 continuous hours, carrying the mail nearly on schedule. For this he was awarded a bonus of $50.

Another time, Haslam came upon a party of 30 armed Paiute warriors. He headed directly toward them at full speed, revolver in hand. Startled by this daring, the Indian leader made a peace signal and let him go through.

The Paiute War knocked the Pony Express out of operation for a month and cost the lives of many good men. It was also a heavy financial blow. Replacement of stations and livestock cost $75,000.

Haslam's ride was exceeded by one other. At the age of 15, William Frederick Cody covered a regular 116-mile run through Wyoming, one of the most dangerous on the route. One time, he found his relay man had been killed, so he rode 76 miles to the next station. He immediately turned around with the return mail, covering a distance of 384 miles. Cody was later to become world famous as "Buffalo Bill."

Coke, Candy Aid Athlete

CHICAGO (AP) — The athlete who fortifies himself with a candy bar or soft drink before the big muscular test may be stoking up a winning burst of energy, a researcher reported today.

The pitcher on the mound or the boxer in the ring uses sugar at a supercharged pace because his muscle contractions are producing a still-unisolated substance that resembles insulin in its action.

Dr. Maurice Goldstein, head of the Department of Metabolism and Endocrine Research at Chicago's Michael Reese Hospital and Medical Center, described his observations of the substance to the Federation of American Societies of Experimental Biologists.
