An extra table is always useful in the living area of any house. The plans for this easily-built, fir plywood table are available free.

This easily-built fir plywood table is an attractive and welcome addition to any room. Here it adds space and style to a bedroom.

Table Has High Style, Many Uses

Many do-it-yourself projects have a "home made" look. But here's a simple table which almost any amateur can build with style.

This multi-use table covers those awkward blank spaces on walls in various parts of the house. It makes a well-proportioned base for a tall table lamp. It also goes nicely under a window, where it can hold ivy, geraniums, philodendrons, or other greenery.

Other uses for this versatile table might be as a desk in the den or bedroom, or as a buffet supper base in the living-dining area.

The table won't damage the budget. It can be built from one panel of 14" fir plywood and four 25-inch lengths of 3/4" pipe. You will also need two scraps of hardboard for the drawer bottoms.

You can build it free-standing on four legs, or anchor one side to the wall and use only two legs. Its six-foot length and six-inch depth give it a slender but massive appearance.

After the pieces are cut from the plywood panel, they are put together with glue and 8-penny finishing nails. For assembly, fasten the bottom to the ends, then put on the back and add the dividers. The top goes on last. In finishing the unit, paint the inside of the compartments before the top goes on.

When buying the fir plywood, ask for the familiar A-D grade,

INT-DEPA, which is available at most lumber yards.

For a free plan which shows how to build the Multi-use Table, write Douglas Fir Plywood Association, Tacoma 2, Washington.

Youths Need Eye Care

EVANSTON, Ill. (UPI)—About 17 per cent of all school children need eye care, two doctors and a nurse reported in Pediatrics, official journal of the American Academy of Pediatrics.

The article, "Eye Health Program in Public Schools" was written by Drs. Lawrence J. Lawson Jr. and Robert A. McGuigan and Irma B. Fricke, a registered nurse. All three are associated with the Northwestern University Medical School and Evanston Hospital. Their findings were based on a study of 15,891 children in the Evanston Community Consolidated Schools.

While the researchers found 17 per cent of the children in need of eye care, they discovered an even higher percentage with some degree of near-sightedness. They estimated that near-sightedness among school children ranges from 29 per cent among kindergartners to 77 per cent among eighth graders.

The article advised prompt treatment of eye conditions among school children to avoid psychological maladjustment and long therapy. It suggested that school systems set up a program for early recognition of eye defects that require professional care.
