THE McLOUGHLIN EMPIRE and its RULERS

BURT BROWN BARKER

The McLoughlin Empire Is Monumental Work Done On History Of Pioneer

By FLOYD WYNNE

The tragedies that pull a family together or tear it apart are captured in this hitherto unrevealed facet of the famed McLoughlin family.

A great deal has been written about the pioneering efforts of the McLoughlin family which played such an important role in the development of the Pacific Northwest, but this book sheds new light on two internal tragedies that marred the family history.

One was the death of young John McLoughlin, son of the man who was chief factor and one of the most powerful figures of the Hudson Bay Company.

Klamath Basin residents will be interested to note that Mount McLoughlin is named for the elder John McLoughlin of Hudson Bay Company fame who died in Oregon City on September 3, 1857.

The young McLoughlin was shot by his own rebellious men on April 20, 1842, at Fort Stikine in Russian territory. He had been a problem child with a ferocious temper, but apparently had settled down and was in command of this remote outpost when he was slain.

An investigation was conducted by Governor Simpson who labelled it "justifiable homicide." This occasioned a series of bitter letters that developed the governor's judgment was hasty, but so embittered both men that McLoughlin was forced to resign from the Hudson Bay Company.

The other tragedy of the family affairs was the relationship between the elder McLoughlin's mother, Angelique, and her father, Colonel Malcolm Fraser.

Angelique's father violently opposed her turning Catholic to marry John McLoughlin, and he left her completely out of his will. The estrangement was a source of conflict in the early years of Dr. John McLoughlin.

These two tragedies and other glimpses into the background of the McLoughlin family are gathered from a series of 118 family letters of the McLoughlins and the Frasers.

The letters were given to the McLoughlin Memorial Association of Oregon City by Mrs. Alice Fraser Prevost of Riviere-du-Loup and Montreal, Canada.

The letters were found in an old secretary in the manor house of the seigniory of Riviere-du-Loup in the village of the same name which Col. Malcolm Fraser purchased for his son, Alexander. The seignior's oldest son had built the manor house and owned the secretary. The letters were written between 1796 and 1857.

Barker writes from a historical connection. His great-grandfather, Thomas Cox, arrived in Salem, Oregon, in October, 1847, with a store of merchandise. He purchased supplies from Dr. John McLoughlin in Oregon City.

This book will provide intriguing reading for the historically minded.

'Rope' Bites, Suit Filed

HOUSTON, Tex. (UPI) — Troy Beeson, 38, filed suit for $77,000 from his former employer because a "rope" he picked up turned out to be a live rattlesnake.

Beeson said he was working on a barge Sept. 13 when he was bitten by the four-foot-long rattler, which fellow crewmen then killed.

He said that when he got out of the hospital, he tried to return to work as a cook for the J. S. Gissel Co., but was fired on account of illness caused by anti-snakebite serum.
