Welfare Views Expressed

PORTLAND (AP) — Welfare workers need to find a balance in their work, ex-Gov. Charles A. Sprague, publisher of the Oregon Statesman, said Tuesday night.

He told the West Coast Regional Conference of the American Public Welfare Association that welfare workers needed to balance their responsibilities as individuals and their responsibilities to the state.

"I know you are distressed by the limits of aid. But you dare not let your sympathies drain all the blood from your heart. You can't become bitter either. We in America are embarking on a new course known as Man and the State, where we are trying to maintain a system of incentives and rewards," Sprague said.

"The provision of welfare aid is one of the costs of industrial efficiency—a modern attempt to carry out the Christian admonition, 'Bear Ye One Another's Burdens,' he said.

The conference was scheduled to end today after a talk by Sam Grais, president of the Minnesota Welfare Conference.

Another speaker, Louisa Dunn, director of the American Public Welfare Association, told some 875 delegates that qualified case workers are needed urgently.

She said it is had that so few people handle "welfare responsibility—which can be administered much more effectively, adequately and understandably."

She expressed hope for as much emphasis on skill of caseworkers as on skill of physicians.

Exams Set For Pupils

Sen. Wayne Morse announced today that preliminary Civil Service examinations will be given in Oregon on Saturday, November 12, to young men interested in nomination to a service academy.

Unmarried men in good physical condition who will have reached their 17th but not their 22nd birthday by July, 1961, are eligible to participate in the examination, the Oregon senator explained.

The tests are the first toward possible appointment to the Military Academy at West Point, N.Y., Naval Academy at Annapolis, Maryland, Air Force Academy at Colorado Springs, or the Merchant Marine Academy at Kings Point, N.Y.

"Because I am allowed to make only a very limited number of academy appointments each year," Morse declared, "I have my decision solely upon the results of impartially conducted, competitive examinations."

The senator urged that young men interested in participating in the November 12 examination write to him immediately to obtain full information and learn the exact locations at which the tests will be administered. His address is 417 Senate Office Building, Washington 25, D.C.

Morse emphasized that the deadline for receipt of inquiries by his office is Oct. 20.

Vote Pamphlets On Way

The first of 800,000 Voters Pamphlets for the November general election flowed from presses in Salem this week as the state's Elections Division under Secretary of State Howell Appling Jr. marked a major step in the publication of the state's official guide to candidates and measures.

Multnomah County, which accounts for nearly one-third of the printing order, also has the largest individual book, with 148 pages. The mammoth publishing job will consume 88 tons of paper to complete the 31 different booklets, the secretary said.

Appling said mailing of the publication to all registered voters is being handled by private contractors in Portland and Salem and will begin this week. Completion of distribution is anticipated prior to October 23.

Appling noted that a slight change in paper used on pamphlets printed in Salem will save $5,900 in publication costs. The different grade, he feels, will be "fully satisfactory for the temporary nature and use of the pamphlets." The change in paper came out of pamphlet printing experiments initiated by Appling earlier this year. The secretary said he was also anticipating some postage savings due to the lighter weight stock.

The secretary again cited potential savings in eliminating duplicate household mailing of the pamphlets. Earlier this year Appling said his office could cut the cost of publication and postage by nearly $60,000 if he were permitted to send only one book to a man and wife rather than individual books to each as is now required by law.

"A well-informed voter is needed to make wise decisions at the polls," Appling said in urging all electors to "study the measures and the candidates described in the pamphlet."

Appling had praise for the "massive job of coordination" performed by the Elections Division in getting the pamphlets published on schedule. "It takes real cooperation among dozens of people in every phase of compiling, proof reading, printing and mailing to get nearly a million pamphlets to the voters in a few short weeks," the secretary said.

Walter, chairman of the House Committee on Un-American Activities said investigators had found the photographs after the two National Security Agency employees turned up in Moscow.

The two men, Bernon F. Mitchell and William H. Martin, left their jobs in June for a vacation. They showed up at a Kremlin-arranged press conference in Moscow Sept. 6 and denounced the United States.

Walter would not say in whose room the photographs had been discovered.

He told United Press International that the photos following the committee's second unannounced and closed-door hearing into the NSA's procedures for screening potential employees.

Walter said discovery of the photographs backed up his contention that at least one of the two men was a homosexual while working for the NSA.

He said the photographs pointed up what he called the "sloppy" pre-employment investigation used by the intelligence gathering organization.

BOMBAY, India (AP)—India's department of atomic energy invited bids Tuesday to build the country's first atomic power station designed to produce 300,000 kilowatts from two nuclear reactors. Keen competition among the Soviet Union, Britain, France and the United States is expected for the estimated $107-million project.
