Census Begins

The Klamath Falls Elementary School District began its biennial census of residents of the district up to 20 years of age Friday.

The only difference between this and similar censuses here is the inclusion of very young children. The district this year will count even infants. It previously counted only those 4 through 19 years of age.

The data collected will be tabulated by electronic machinery at Klamath Union High School. District officials hope thus to have a variety of information within quick reach.

If the system works well, and if the city's population does not shift drastically, officials will have a sort of crystal ball in which to peer and foresee school needs. The census must be taken each even-numbered year, state law commands. From information received, the state will decide how much basic school support funds the district will receive. Locally, the census will be used to determine equitable distribution of county school funds.

A battery of personnel, most of them Parent-Teacher Association members, are taking the census door-to-door. They hope to have received information from every home in the district by November 15.

All persons under 20 years of age in each family are to be listed, whether or not they are married, in the armed services, self-supporting, attending schools elsewhere and so forth.

Dependent children — wards of the court or approved child-care agencies — living in the district will be counted, whether or not the agency is located in the district.

Extreme accuracy is needed because the records are accepted as evidence of age on applications for delayed birth certificates, work permits, passports and other documents.

Census enumerators have been instructed to notify the district clerk of anyone who refuses to answer questions or addresses where they are barred from entry by a dog.

Enumerators will make 15 cents per name recorded and will receive nine cents per mile driven. They may receive more information by calling the district clerk's office, TU 4-3432.

On a card to be filled, the name of the person counted will go at the top — last name first, then first and middle names. The figure "1" will be used to denote a male, and the figure "2" a female.

Each person counted must list his age as of October 25. The card should also state whether the subject is blind, deaf or both and if the parent or guardian works for a government.

District officials, estimating from the previous year's census, last year worked on the theory that the district contained 5,370 persons between four and 20 years of age, whether or not they attended school.

Measure 6 Wins Backing

The Board of Directors of the Klamath County Chamber of Commerce has endorsed Ballot Measure 6—State Bonds For Higher Education Facilities—in the November 8 general election. The board took the action in response to a unanimous recommendation from the chamber's taxation committee, Mrs. Eva Cook, chairman.

Earlier this year the chamber board expressed its endorsement of the then unnumbered, untitled ballot measure in a notice published in the Oregon Chamber Executives' "Around The State Bulletin."

The measure, if passed, would amend the state constitution to permit the state to increase its bonded indebtedness to construct additional self-liquidating higher education facilities such as dormitories and cafeterias.

The taxation committee, in its consideration of the measure, pointed to the "terrific impact" it felt defeat of the measure would have on our own institution of higher learning in Klamath County—Oregon Technical Institute.
