

Governor Names KF Woman To Nursing Advisory Council

By RUTH KING
A Klamath Falls woman, Mrs. William E. (Helen) Dwyer was appointed this week by Gov. Mark O. Hatfield to the Advisory Council to the State Board of Nursing.

Mrs. Dwyer, a licensed practical nurse will serve from October 27, 1960, to August 15, 1964. Her formal acceptance has been returned to the governor's office. Mrs. Dwyer is president-elect of the Oregon State Licensed Practical Nurse's Association Inc. She returned recently from attending the National Federation of LPN Inc. convention in Albuquerque.

MRS. HELEN DWYER

Helen Dwyer did not "just drift" into the nursing profession, she said. For some years she served the public in a downtown mercantile store, but always the desire to help humanity in some personal way haunted her. She had been in and out of hospitals where the care of many nurses dedicated to their profession was more than "just work."

"With few exceptions, night and day the 'women in white' gave personal comfort and extra care to the ill. It was during one of those times that she made her decision.

A few years ago when Oregon Technical Institute offered courses in practical nursing Mrs. Dwyer enrolled taking her academic work under Virginia Phillips R.N. and coordinator Natalie Reichenberg.

With a large class of other women she studied for 12 months, getting her clinical experience in Klamath Valley and Hillside hospitals in eight months. She passed the state board examinations and other requirements and received her license to practice the work she had chosen to do.

For five years she has had general duty at Hillside Hospital working the 11 p.m. to 7:30 a.m. shift in the pediatrics (children) and women's wing.

As other LP nurses she is privileged to wear white and her cap bears the insignia of her profession.

With a burgeoning population expansion and changes in the character of health service and the changing role of the professional nurse, it became necessary for the medical profession to extend nursing services and to do it in part through utilization of the licensed practical nurse.

All but the District of Columbia provide for the licensing of practical nurses.

Licensed Practical Nurses work with and under the supervision of registered nurses. There are now 30,000 members of the LPN, a group of dedicated women with its goal higher education standards, continuing cooperative work with allied groups and the public to improve health of the community and county, at the same time seeking recognition through the State Board of Nursing by representation on the State Advisory Council.

Mrs. Dwyer is a past president of Area No. 8 LPNs which has a registration of 65 members. Area 8 is affiliated with the National Federation.

Helen Dwyer was born the day after Christmas in Yankton, South Dakota, remaining until the summer of 1932 when with her family she came West "looking hard" for a new location. The family of seven found that place in Klamath Falls.

It is here that Helen Dwyer has found her niche and as the poet Bertin Braley wrote, "It's figuring now and learning why—And looking forward and thinking high, and dreaming a little and doing much—It's always keeping in closest touch—With what is fine in word or deed: It's being thorough, yet making speed; It's serving, striving through strain and stress; It's doing your noblest—that's Success!"

Expert Tells Cancer Toll

NEW YORK (AP)—In the next 10 years three million Americans will die of cancer.

That prediction, based on present mortality rates, was made today by Harry McEnery Jr. of New Orleans, a director of the American Cancer Society.

"That is the measure of our challenge," he told the society's annual meeting. "Are we doing all we can to save the lives of those who have cancer?"

It is in the power of medicine to almost eliminate cancer of the uterus as a cause of death, he said. But cancer of the breast, the digestive tract, the lung, and other areas are still great challenges.

The cancer society will have to get greater financial support from business and industry, reported Edgar J. Forio, a Coca-Cola Co. executive and chairman of the society's 1960 money-raising crusade. He said only 10 per cent of the society's income now comes from business sources.

ORIENTAL ORIGIN
The word "catchup" (or "ketchup") originated in the Orient from the Malay word "kecap," meaning "taste," which was pronounced like "kaychup."

GEORGE S. MARDIKIAN

Lamb Talk Set Saturday

A famous restaurateur, George M. Mardikian, owner of Omar Khayyam's of San Francisco, will speak at the lamb buffet dinner at the Willard Hotel Saturday, November 5.

The 6:30 p.m. dinner and following wool style show is sponsored by the Klamath County Farm Bureau. The dinner is open to the public.

The speaker will bring an interesting talk, "The Romance of Lamb."

He was born in Armenia and is a naturalized citizen of the United States. He was educated in Central College in Constantinople and came to the United States in 1922 to work in San Francisco restaurants. He was a steward aboard ship around the world cruise in 1928 and two years later opened his first place of business in Fresno. The second Omar Khayyam's followed in Fresno in 1935 and soon after he added the famous San Francisco restaurant.

Mardikian worked with the Near East Relief and with former President Herbert Hoover's food relief program in the Caucasus Region and was a food consultant to the Army for several years, winning many friends among admiring service men.

He is known as the "GI's Chow Champion," traveling over the entire world trying to solve food problems where service men have been concentrated.

He was awarded the War Department Commendation by Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson, Gen. Joseph McNary, Gen. Matthew Ridgway for his work. He has also received commendation from Ex-President Harry Truman, Ex-President Herbert Hoover and from President Eisenhower.

Tutor Raps; Saves Face

LONDON (UPI)—When school teacher Dr. Simon Galin wants to go into a classroom he always knocks on the door first.

Dr. Galin told a conference of the National Union of Teachers Thursday it saves him possible embarrassment.

"There may be a couple of school kids making love inside," said Dr. Galin, 69, a lecturer at Hendon Technical College.

"Once when I knocked, I was told to stay outside."

The professor looked back over his long career in the teaching profession and recounted for the benefit of his younger colleagues how students have changed.

"They used to make love in secret," he said. "Then they made love in a corner of the playground. Now they do it in the classroom."

This obsession of modern youth to make love instead of learning impelled him to ask a couple of teen-agers why they could not wait until they left school.

They replied gloomily, "We will be dead in 10 years."

CHAMBER COMMENTS

by GEORGE T. CALLISON
Manager
KLAMATH COUNTY CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

The Klamath County Chamber of Commerce will hold a joint luncheon meeting tomorrow noon at the Winema Hotel with representatives of Associated Oregon Industries. Because of the special interest this forum program will have for all business and industry in Klamath County, anyone interested in it is invited to attend whether or not they are members of AOI or the Klamath County Chamber of Commerce. The no-host luncheon is scheduled for the Camas Room at the Winema.

According to Ivan Conleton, general manager of Associated Oregon Industries, the program will include a discussion of a number of problems Oregon businessmen must face today, as well as other problems they should be prepared to cope with in the near future.

Conleton and Charles Ogle, assistant to the president of AOI, will also outline and explain the organization's 1961 legislative program in such fields as taxation, unemployment compensation, labor-management relations, natural resources, retail affairs and many others.

During the past year, businessmen and industrialists throughout the United States have displayed an intensified interest in politics and in the workings of their local, state and federal governments. Some of the credit for this interest undoubtedly lies with the U.S. Chamber's "Action Course in Practical Politics," which some 60 members of the local chamber participated in earlier this year.

But whatever the reason, the revitalized interest is there, and businessmen who formerly showed little or no concern for politics or government, or who were content to sit on the sidelines and complain, are now actively engaged in politics from the precinct level on up, and are giving much closer attention to the operation of government at all levels.

As another feature of tomorrow's Chamber-AOI forum luncheon, businessmen who are interested in working more effectively with their representatives and senators in the state legislature will be given a short four-point course on what to do and what not to do.

Three new members joined the chamber's "Eye-Openers Club," or membership committee, at its first meeting of the new fiscal year this week. They are Dick Laundenschlager, recently elected chamber treasurer, Chuck Pederson and Dave Snow, Wally McBride, "Eye-Opener" of the year just concluded—he signed more new members than anyone else on the committee during the past 12 months—was given a matched set of luggage in recognition of his efforts at the Wednesday morning meeting. Cattlemen To Hold Annual Meeting Wednesday

The Klamath County Cattlemen's Association will hold its annual meeting Wednesday, November 2, at the Winema Hotel. The association president, Bert Stanley, will preside. Other attendees include: Kent MacGruder, Clatskanie, state president; Cecil Edwards, Prineville, state secretary; and Ted Hyde, Klamath Falls, and J. D. Monteith, as director-in-charge, meeters for breakfast the last Wednesday of each month.

Other chamber committees are in the process of reorganization. Directors-in-charge, chairman and committee personnel will be named at the chamber's next board of directors meeting Wednesday, November 9.

Members will discuss a suggested bull sale sponsored by producers, new brand law modifications and problems of the business. Officers will be elected. Currently serving with Stanley as county association officers are Alvin Cheyne, vice president and

Ray Peterson, Klamath County agent, secretary.
Cow Belles, women's auxiliary, will also meet Wednesday, November 2, with a luncheon at 1:30 p.m. at the Yacht Club for business and election. Mrs. Don Johnson, retiring president will conduct the meeting.
Both groups will attend a dinner-dance at Reames Golf and Country Club arranged by the

Timber Loss Payment Set

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—A U.S. Court of Appeals decision allows Washington state timber owners to recover a total of $1,195,000 from the United States for losses suffered in a 1951 forest fire.

The fire in August and September of that year burned on Olympic Peninsula forest lands in the Sleduck Valley area.

It was started by a locomotive of the Port Angeles and Western Railroad south of Heckelville and subsequently covered 1,600 acres of Fibreboard Products, Inc. land and 7,000 acres of Rayonier Inc. land.

Federal Dist. Judge George Boldt of Tacoma in September, 1958, dismissed complaints against the government filed by Rayonier and 21 other plaintiffs.

Judge Boldt agreed there had not been prompt and vigorous action by U.S. forestry rangers in suppressing the original blaze. But he ruled the plaintiffs had not established that, had such negligence not existed, the fire would have been contained to its original site near Heckelville.

The appeals court vacated Boldt's decision. This makes it possible for Rayonier to recover a stipulated $895,000 damages from the federal government and the other 21 plaintiffs to get a stipulated total of $300,000.

The appeals court also said the trial court may entertain further proceedings to determine what, if any, liability might exist against Fibreboard Products, Inc., and the railroad on the question of whether they exercised due diligence in seeing that the blaze did not spread.
