College, Pro Football Teams Plan To Continue Air Travel

NEW YORK (UPI) — College and professional football teams which normally travel by plane are not changing their future flight plans because of last weekend's air crash in Ohio that claimed the lives of 16 California Poly players.

Sports officials regarded the crash as "tragic" and "unfortunate," but they also agreed unanimously with Al Masters, athletic director at Stanford University, who pointed out that "people don't quit flying now because of one accident."

"Our teams will keep on flying," Masters added. "The odds are with you."

Members of the top-ranked Iowa team will fly to Minneapolis for their "game of the year" with second-ranked Minnesota Saturday. Other teams in the Big Ten Conference also will rely on planes for their future road games this year, according to a survey conducted by United Press International.

"That Ohio crash was unfortunate but I don't think we'd change our flying plans because of a single accident," said William Aspinwall, athletic business manager at the University of Wisconsin. "We try to fly with the best airlines and we have a lot of confidence in their planes."

Wilbur Johns, athletic director at UCLA, said he hadn't given any thought to a change in his team's flights "because we have flown all over the country for years. . and accidents can happen on buses or trains, too."

Pro football officials shared the same view.

"We will continue to fly," said a spokesman for the San Francisco Forty-Niners. "We have every confidence in our system of transportation."

Don Kellett, general manager of the world champion Baltimore Colts, said, "We don't contemplate making any changes in our transportation schedules," while a spokesman for the Pittsburgh Steelers declared, "The (Ohio) crash was a tragic thing but the airplane is here to stay."

Giant Hurler Nets Lowest ERA In Loop

NEW YORK (AP)—Lefty Mike McCormick posted the lowest earned run average in the National League in 1960, giving the San Francisco Giants their third consecutive ERA winner.

Figures compiled by The Associated Press disclosed today that McCormick wound up with a 2.70 earned run mark. Frank Baumann of the Chicago White Sox, another southpaw pitcher, won the ERA crown in the American League with 2.68.

The Giants' Sam Jones was the National League ERA leader in 1959, and Stu Miller in 1958. Giants' pitchers have won the title seven times in the past 12 seasons.

McCormick yielded 76 earned runs in 253 innings. He had a 15-12 won-lost record and hurled four shutouts. Baumann, whose 13-6 record included a pair of shutouts, allowed 55 earned runs in 185 innings.

Ernie Broglio of St. Louis was runnerup in the National League with a 2.75 ERA. Jim Bunning of Detroit was second to Baumann with 2.79.

Moses Joins NY Yankees

NEW YORK (UPI) — Wally Moses, the man new manager Ralph Houk wanted, joined the New York Yankees today as batting and first-base coach.

Appointment of the 50-year-old Moses, one-time star fielder and more recently a noted tutor of batters, completed Houk's coaching staff. He joins Frank Crosetti and Jim Hegan, holdovers from Casey Stengel's regime, and Johnny Sain.

Crosetti will continue to serve as third-base coach, Hegan will work in the bullpen and Sain will handle the pitchers.

Navy Squad May Write Grid History

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Joe Bellino and his shipmates have a chance to write Naval Academy football history this weekend if they can defeat a tough Duke University football team at Durham, N.C.

The Midshipmen will be gunning for two academy records as well as hoping to preserve a winning streak which started with the last three games last season and included a 43-12 romp over Army.

In defeating Notre Dame 14-7 Saturday they became the first Navy team since the 1910-11 seasons to win 10 in a row, a Navy record. They also became the first team since 1934 to win the first seven games of a season, tying another academy mark.

Bellino, a dazzling halfback who is the academy's best since Buzz Borries of the 1934 team, has played a major role in every one of those 10 victories stretching back into last season. He has scored 13 touchdowns this season.

And Navy has come up with a lot more playing talent around him than anyone expected it would have before the season opened.

Duke has lost only one game, a 31-6 defeat by Michigan, and won five.

Bragan Dons Business Suit

HOUSTON, Tex. (UPI) — Fiery Bobby Bragan swapped his playing flannels for a business suit today and vowed to give the new Houston baseball franchise in the National League "a strong team in the nation's strongest league."

Bragan, 43, was named director of player personnel and manager of the farm system by Gabe Paul, Houston general manager, at a press conference Monday.

"Whether to take this job was a hard decision for me," the colorful, energetic Bragan said. "I have always played the game of baseball on the field.

"But there is such a bright opportunity in Houston, I could not afford to turn down the offer."

No salary terms were announced for the former Pittsburgh and Cleveland manager and Los Angeles Dodgers coach.

Paul was elated to have Bragan in the Houston camp.

"Bragan was our No. 1 choice from a list of several other top men," Paul said. "We feel he is one of the best judges of baseball talent in the country and he will have an important part in building the Houston club for the start of play in 1962."

Pitcher Eli Grba of the New York Yankees is the son of Joe Grba, athletic trainer for Hardin-Simmons University.

Financial Conditions Cause Small Schools To Run Risk

By OSCAR FRALEY

NEW YORK (UPI) — The air tragedy which struck California Poly's football team is risked by every small college which necessarily pinches pennies in flying to its games, Rhode Island grid coach Herb Maack asserted today.

Small college football always is in shaky financial condition because of low guarantees and poor gates. Thus, ordinarily, there is a great deal of bargain basement shopping for the cheapest available charter to transport small college teams to intersectional games.

"We learned our lesson last year," Maack disclosed. "No more for us."

The Rhode Island team stood very close to tragedy last season when it flew to Buffalo for a game. The charter which was to fly the Rhode Island team wobbled in for a landing at Providence as the team waited to board it. The plane bounced over the fence and tore a hole in its roof.

Board The Plane

"Well," says Maack, "we boarded it anyhow and flew to Buffalo. After all, we had a $7,500 guarantee and the plane only cost us $3,000 for the charter."

The charter, which since has lost its license, had trouble getting the door closed before the team took off. Then, when Maack wanted to go up to the cockpit and ask the pilot a question, the handle of the door to the cockpit came off in his hand.

"It was a little chilly on the boys who sat under the hole in the roof, too," he remembers.

Maack said he wanted it clearly understood that he was making no inference toward the charter group which flew the California team and which killed 16 Cal Poly players when it cracked up at Toledo.

"It's simply that the major teams can afford to fly the best lines," Maack pointed out. "That's fine, when you have a sound four-motored plane. But after that Buffalo experience we decided that money wasn't that important and from now on we'd play right in our own area."

It's bad enough, quipped the irrepressible Maack, traveling by bus.

Bus Catches Fire

"We only have to go 100 miles to play Connecticut," he related. "Well, our bus caught fire and we had to hitch-hike the last 50 miles. We got there too late for me to give the kids instructions so they played a helluva good game."

Traveling by train to intersectional games takes too much time out from school work, he explained, so Rhode Island gave up the long trips even though it costs the school money.

"Financially we're as bad as last year, maybe even worse," Maack shrugged, adding with tongue in cheek, "The president said he would help so now he's sitting on the bench. Maybe he meant he'd help us coach."

But, he could have added, nobody seems to mind the financial hardships. They are, after all, alive.

Lady Lands Referee Job

LYNCH, Ky. (AP)—Joe Golden ranks among the top high school basketball officials in southeastern Kentucky. But it seems certain the first boo-boo he pulls he's going to hear about it at home.

The new basketball authority in the Golden household is Joe's pretty brunette wife, Lou — the first woman ever to get an official's license from the Kentucky High School Athletic Association.

Lou and Joe will work as a team.

"In the past month she has had a cook book in one hand and a rule book in the other," said Joe.

It was Joe who first suggested his wife try her hand at officiating.

Lou, 28 and the mother of a 10-year-old boy, works her first game Dec. 1.

"The idea of it all is very fascinating and I know that I have two strikes against me when I go out on the floor but I'll give it a try," she explained.

Barnstormers, Stars Tie 7-7

TOYAMA, Japan (UPI) — The barnstorming San Francisco Giants belted four home runs here in southern Japan today against Japan's All-Stars, but had to settle for a 7-7 tie at the halfway mark of their 16-day tour of the Stone Lantern circuit.

The game was called because of darkness after 10 innings. Some 28,000 spectators witnessed the event, which gave the Giants four victories, three losses and one tie in their post-season goodwill series in Japan.

The visiting Giants had a 7-0 lead after five and a half innings, but gave up to a tie when the All-Stars rallied in the sixth.

Willie Mays, who was batting a weak .227 with five hits in 22 attempts—including just one homer—hit in two homers today off right handers Masaaki Koyama of the Hanshin Tigers and Ritsuo Horimoto of the Yomiuri Giants.

Orlando Cepeda also won dual honors. He hit one off Koyama and another off right hander Minoru Murayama, also of the Hanshin Tigers.

Outfielder Kenjiro Tamiya of the Daimai Orions blasted a homer off the Giants starting pitcher, southpaw Mike McCormick.

Pro Scouts Eye Gopher

MINNEAPOLIS (AP)—It's not true, as some of football's more impressionable scouts have reported, that Minnesota's Tom Brown munches enemy halfbacks for breakfast.

"I have a very stable diet," said the amiable giant. "It does not include halfbacks."

It might only happen at Minnesota, where big-shouldered linemen are the toast of the state and dashing halfbacks merely tolerated, but this 235-pound wrecker is the Gopher with the highest popularity and the biggest reputation.

Big Ten scouts, and those from the pro leagues, say he deserves all of it.

Brown and his massive playmates collide with top-ranked Iowa Saturday in one of college football's climax games of the season, a struggle of unbeaten Big Ten powers.

Brown is a fearsome sight when he charges from his middle guard position to pursue a passer. With similarly disposed linemen he has made Minnesota's defense the best offensive weapon the team has.

Brown already is under draft by the Baltimore Colts.

Under Bureau of Advertising Direction a study was conducted by the research firm, Leonard J. Bisbing, of Milwaukee, during the 1960 Wisconsin primary. It disclosed that . . .

Only four days before voting, 40% of those intending to vote hadn't decided on a candidate . . . proving that advertising is vital right up to election day.

The Wisconsin study also showed that people most familiar with the candidates stressed newspapers as their prime source of information.

"The American Voter" a book recently published by the University of Michigan Survey Research Center says the same thing . . . "Printed media projected a much stronger image of a candidate."

Hunters May Skip Deer Report Cards

The Oregon Game Commission reminds deer hunters that for the first time in many years they are not required to report their kill by the usual report card system. In fact no report card was issued this year with the regular deer tag.

Many hunters have forgotten or failed to realize they did not receive the report card when they purchased their deer tag, and believing the card lost, are reporting their kill or lack of success to the game commission by letter, post card, or by sending in their deer tag. All hunters are advised that the big game tag must be retained with the meat until the meat is consumed.

The original intent of the report card system was to determine the harvest of big game animals, but to be successful all cards had to be returned. However, from year to year only about 50 per cent of the hunters cooperated by filling out and returning the cards. The game commission also felt that these returns were heavily weighted in favor of successful hunters. Because of these two factors, the cards were never used to determine total take but were valuable in prorating the kill by county or area. The total kill of big game animals was calculated by a random survey of hunters.

Last year the game commission stepped up its random survey method and discontinued completely the issuance of hunter report cards. Under the new system, 20,000 hunter questionnaires are sent to randomly selected hunters following the hunting seasons. Hunters are requested to report their hunting success or failure on all game species. Those hunters who fail to report within the time limit set are visited by game commission personnel and the information desired is obtained. From such a survey, the total kill results are quite accurate, plus or minus a few per cent either way.

All hunters receiving questionnaires are required by law to fill them out as accurately as possible and return them to the game commission. Failure to do so could result in having hunting privileges refused. The 20,000-questionnaire survey will again be conducted this year following the hunting seasons.

Scribe Lodges Beef Against Hunting Accident Notoriety

By BILL JENKINS

I have a mild protest to lodge against the newspapers, the wire services, the radio stations and the television outlets in general. I feel that it is high time these media took a second look at their reporting of the hunting season accidents and stopped playing into the hands of the anti-gun crowd.

No sooner does the deer season get underway than the reading public is led up the primrose path by those zealous but somewhat biased reporters who consider death to be the prime topic.

It sometimes seems that every fatality that occurs during the season is blamed in one fashion or another on the hunting fraternity. All of which is highly unfair. And, worse yet, furnishes that much more ammunition for the self seeking politicians who are convinced that anti-gun legislation will buy them votes.

Take the case in Oregon this year of the chap who was accidentally shot in his home while he was preparing for a hunting trip. As I recall the case the man had been cleaning a deer rifle and got up to change the station on the TV set. His four year old son picked up the gun and drilled his father through the back, unfortunately fatally. No one could deny that this was a tragic circumstance. But the point I make is that it could have happened at any time in the year. But the city papers came out with a blaring headline about a "hunter fatality."

Even worse is the case of the fellows who keel over of heart attacks while they are hunting. Should these of necessity be written off as hunting accidents? If a man drops dead of a heart attack on his way to the office he isn't counted up as an industrial accident or fatality. So why should we go out of our way to make the hunting picture look bad because a man happened to be in the woods when the fatal attack came?

If a group of men are on their way to a deer area and are involved in an auto accident that leads to a fatality nine times out of ten it will be reported as a "hunting fatality." But if these same men were on a business trip and a similar accident occurred no reporter on earth would think of calling it a business tragedy.

I think it high time that we took a more realistic look at this business of reporting the news of hunting accidents. By going at it the way we do we are merely spiting ourselves and doing a disservice to the hunting clan. A disservice they in no way deserve.

Truth in reporting the news certainly. But not distortion. If a man is shot while hunting that is a bona fide hunting accident. If he is killed it should certainly be reported in a factual manner. But if a hunter collapses of a heart attack while cutting wood for the fire I cannot see that as a hunting fatality.

It would be as reasonable to say that a man who was killed by a car while he was crossing the street on his way to a gun store to buy a box of shells was a hunting fatality.

I have had some real ringtailed arguments with people on this subject. Those in the industry defend it on the grounds that it is customary to do so. They point out that everyone who dies during a holiday weekend is tallied in the final count. Which is true.

But I take the liberty of splitting hairs and saying that hunting is a separate matter entirely. Why? Simply because hunting is a privilege still held by the American people but which is threatened by the short-sighted, biased thou-shalt-not school of cranks and politicians who are dedicated to the premise that the American people shall be made to suffer.

Hunting is a privilege, not a right. It has to be so under modern conditions. And privileges can be denied. So I say let's be honest in our appraisal of the situation. Let's not go out of our way to paint a black picture when the subject isn't black at all. Let's forget sensationalism for a moment and give the poor old Nimrods a sporting chance.

Tigers May Ink Casey

DETROIT (AP)—Casey Stengel is a top prospect for manager of the Detroit Tigers, the Tiger front office said Monday night.

Detroit has been without a manager since early last month when Joe Gordon resigned.

A statement quoted Rick Ferrell, assistant to President John F. Fetzer as saying that "Casey Stengel's name had come up several times and that he was seriously considering him as a recommendation to be made to" Fetzer.

The Senate Select Committee on National Water Resources predicts there will be 47 million sports fishermen by 1980.
