(9) Voyage of the 'Beagle'

by Don Oakley and John Lane

ROUTE OF THE 'BEAGLE'

In December, 1831, His Majesty's Ship Beagle left England on a surveying and scientific trip around the world. On board was a 22-year-old naturalist, Charles Darwin. The Beagle's voyage ended five years later, but in Darwin's mind a trip into the unknown was just beginning that was to last a lifetime and eventually affect every branch of human knowledge.

As the Beagle touched at little-known places, Darwin was struck by the seemingly limitless variety of animals and plants in the world. Yet among the differences there were disturbing likenesses. It was as if two separate species—of birds, for instance—had sprung from the same distant ancestor. Could this be possible?

THE ARGENTINE PAMPAS—A VAST CEMETERY OF EXTINCT SPECIES

THE GALAPAGOS ISLANDS—BIRTHPLACE OF NEW SPECIES

Armed with Lyell's Principles of Geology, Darwin noted how time had changed the character of South America and its animal life. In Patagonia he found the fossil bones of an ancestor of the llama. In the Andes there was evidence that the foot of these mountains had once been the shore of the Pacific, now 700 miles away. On either side of this barrier lived different species of the same animal.

In the Galapagos Archipelago, 500 miles from the mainland, entirely new species of tortoises, birds and lizards abounded, yet they were definitely related to those on the continent. What was more, they differed on each island. Was each a separate "creation"?

Back in England, Darwin began to collect all the data he could find. It was Thomas Malthus' Essay on Population which gave him the clue: In nature, more individuals are born than can possibly survive. In the struggle for life—between themselves and other organisms and against a changing environment—the best-adapted ones are favored. They are more likely to survive and reproduce themselves. Over a period of time, slight, beneficial modifications give rise to wholly new forms.

THE KEY: NATURAL SELECTION AND THE STRUGGLE FOR LIFE

Still, for more than 20 years, Darwin withheld his idea from publication. He knew well the reaction his theory would cause. It was almost an accident that it was finally made known.

State Police Probe Auto Accident

State police investigated an auto accident across from the Merrill High School at 6:40 a.m. Tuesday.

Officers said Leroy Rudolph Schlecht, 21, 639 Pine Street, Klamath Falls, was headed north through Merrill. He slowed down by the high school to let some pedestrians cross when his car was struck in the rear by a vehicle driven by Virgil Dwayne Cobb, 18, Merrill. There were no injuries and no citations were issued at the scene of the accident.

TRUTH IN PORTRAITS

There's still time to advertise!

Under Bureau of Advertising Direction a study was conducted by the research firm, Leonard J. Bisbing, of Milwaukee, during the 1960 Wisconsin primary. It disclosed that . . .

Only four days before voting, 40% of those intending to vote hadn't decided on a candidate . . . proving that advertising is vital right up to election day.

The Wisconsin study also showed that people most familiar with the candidates stressed newspapers as their prime source of information.

"The American Voter" a book recently published by the University of Michigan Survey Research Center says the same thing . . . "Printed media projected a much stronger image of a candidate."

Herald and News advertising deadlines are two working days prior to publication. The last day for political advertising will be Monday, Nov. 7. Copy for that publication will be accepted up to 5:00 p.m. Friday, Nov. 4.

Let the Herald and News advertising staff help you plan for final political advertising now.

Lonely Heart Taken By Woman

By ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I know you'll say I'm a rock head but if you print this letter, it may help to warn others.

I became acquainted with a lady through a Lonely Heart Club. She sent me a picture, and her letters sounded educated and respectable. I had lost my wife a few years back and wanted a mother for my boy. This woman said she was widowed and had three children who needed a daddy.

After four months of writing back and forth I sent money for her and the three kids to come to Fairbanks, Alaska, where I'm working. She lived in Maryland, so you know this was quite a hunk of dough. She did not arrive on the day she was supposed to, and I haven't heard from her since. I'm so mad I'm tempted to hire detectives to hunt her up, but then what good would it do even if I could find her? It is unlikely. Just print my letter as a warning to others. Thank you—HAROLD

Dear Harold: It's amazing how many reasonably sensible people do unbelievably stupid things when they are lonely. For this reason I refuse, flatly, to put one reader in touch with another, through this column.

I am opposed, unequivocally, to any sort of blind matchmaking and I don't care how respectable it may sound. I've known of matchmaking outfits which have succeeded in hoodwinking even respectable clergymen into the act.

I've examined almost a ton of the Lonely Hearts literature which runs the gamut from the cheap "Pen Pal Club Plan" to the highly polished "Selection Agency." And there's always a price.

In my opinion, it all boils down to this: Grown men and women who have failed to find a mate through accepted social channels and are willing to put the selection of a life-long partner in the hands of an agency are a little off-balance. It may work in one case out of a thousand, but I wouldn't touch such stuff with a 40-foot pole.

Dear Ann: I have a problem I can't talk over with my husband. He idolizes his sister — and SHE is the problem.

I'm not good at club work or organizations. I have four children under 12 years of age and they keep me plenty busy. I do all my own housework, baking and laundry. I love to read but I haven't had time to sit down with a book in five years.

My sister-in-law lives two blocks away. She is a very outgoing person, president of two clubs, and is involved in school board activities and local politics. Her children are the same ages as three of mine, and they fight a lot. Five days a week I have her kids here for lunch, dinner, or both. She never hires a sitter if they go out for an evening. She brings them over here. She and her husband take several short trips during the year and I get the kids.

She calls me "The World's Best Sister-in-Law." I like the title, but her children are too much for me. If I wanted to take care of seven kids I would have had three more of my own. What can I do?—STUCK

Dear Stuck: Your husband didn't get you into this spot so don't expect him to get you out. Your real problem is ambivalence (OK—look it up). You enjoy the title, but you don't like what goes with it. When you reach the point where the title means less than the extra work, you'll let her know.

City Police Probe Thefts

City police received more reports Tuesday of thefts which had occurred over the weekend.

A movie camera was reported stolen from Waggoner Drugs, 839 Main Street, Friday or Saturday. The camera, worth $139.50, was taken from a showcase in the front window.

Mrs. Dorothy Phyllis Davis, 5609 Altamont Drive, said a .22 caliber revolver was taken from her desk Sunday at the Thunderbird Drive-In.

Mrs. Harry Goeller, 200 Pine Street, said she lost her purse downtown Monday. It contained personal papers, credit cards and $2.

Lance Lake, 2350 California, reported his bike was taken from the Pelican School grounds.

A red and white tricycle was found by Mrs. Florence Briggs, 935 Division Street. It was brought to the police station.

A spring opening of the Ellington Lumber Mill located at Pelican City is anticipated by Robert P. Ellington Jr., spokesman for the mill operation which closed October 28.

Ellington, vice president of the Ellington Timber Company and general manager of the Ellington Lumber Company, confirmed the closing in a statement Monday.

Closing of the mill will affect a crew of 20 men.

Ellington stated the seasonal closing was due to the extremely low price of lumber. The yard and shipping department will continue in operation.
