Fund Raising For Churches Now More Business Of Commercial Pros

NEW YORK (AP)—Tambourines still jingle on street corners and humble nuns remain at their familiar posts, but across the land the chore of church fund raising has become more and more the business of commercial pros.

Some churchmen and churchgoers deplore the trend; others see it not only as a necessity but a boon.

Advocates have found that professionally conducted campaigns usually don't last as long, are more efficient and demand less time of volunteer church committees.

This year America's churches will collect about $3.5 billion with about one billion of it earmarked for new construction.

Experts estimate 70 per cent of the sum will come through formal campaigns directed for the most part by commercial firms or professionally trained churchmen.

The Rev. Davis Rice Holt III, in a master's thesis at Union Theological Seminary of Virginia, believes professional fund raising methods often involve spurious explanations of scripture and promote the Pharisaism of conspicuous pledging.

Commercial organizations, he said, often are pagan in nature and operate on a profit motive with their only objective getting the money, period.

Dr. T. K. Thompson, director of stewardship for the National Council of Churches, takes a directly opposite view: "Retaining professional counsel for fund raising is not essentially different from retaining architectural counsel in the construction of a new church building," he said.

"A reservoir of technical information and skill exists which should be tapped by the church." But Dr. Thompson insists commercial firms must maintain certain ethical standards if they would get a church's business.

Broadly, he suggests a firm and its personnel must have wide experience and that a set fee, agreed upon in advance, be the method of payment rather than a percentage of the campaign collections.

The fee system is of utmost importance to most pastors who want to take every precaution against an ultra hard-sell approach which could alienate their flocks.

Church and church related construction—still riding the crest of a wave born a decade ago—is the main reason for the emergence of the professional fund raiser in the nation's churches.

Collection plates just don't get the job done, pastors say.

Pendleton Man Held In Embezzlement

PENDLETON (AP)—A Pendleton real estate man was charged with embezzlement here and arrested while on a business trip to Baker Friday. He is C. E. York.

A grand jury indictment charged him with embezzling some $4,000 belonging to Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Lundy, obtained in the course of a real estate transaction. The Lundys formerly lived here but moved to Alaska.

York was to be returned here today. The warrant set bail at $7,500.

He has been active in municipal politics in recent years, failing in a 1958 bid for a place on the City Council, and failing too to get the city manager plan of government abandoned in favor of the mayor-council system. He was president of the Pendleton Voters League which had a number of disagreements with the City Council and which led the fight to change the system.

Court Rules Co-ops Need Not Pay

SALEM (AP)—The Oregon Supreme Court held Friday that federated cooperatives do not have to pay the state's corporation excise tax.

Federated cooperatives, of which Oregon has about 25, are formed by other cooperatives. The Tax Commission sought to collect a tax on materials sold by the federated cooperatives to their member cooperatives.

After the Tax Commission tried to collect the tax from Pacific Supply Cooperative for the years 1954 through 1957, that cooperative sued the commission.

The Supreme Court, upholding Circuit Judge Alfred T. Sulmonetti of Portland, ruled that the cooperative does not have to pay.

The decision, by Justice A. T. Goodwin, gives federated cooperatives the same tax exemption that is given to other cooperatives.

The amount which the commission sought to collect from Pacific Supply Cooperative was small—only $52 a year.

But the Tax Commission said that it and the other federated cooperatives do a business of $31 million a year in Oregon, all through sales to their member co-ops.

The high court held that the Legislature intended that the federated co-ops be treated the same as any other co-op.

CHAMBER COMMENTS

by GEORGE T. CALLISON
Manager
Klamath County Chamber of Commerce

Some activities of a chamber of commerce, which go unnoticed, are often as important to the business and professional community as some of the more generally known and publicized programs. I'm thinking particularly of the large number of mail inquiries which are given careful attention and answers . . . an average of 3,000 a year at your Klamath County Chamber of Commerce.

Of course much of this mail is concerned with travel and tourist information but, in addition, inquiries are received almost daily which could lead to increased business for present concerns or the establishment of new businesses.

Numerous requests are received for information about property available for the construction of new homes or businesses, or for farm or ranch property. Very often requests are made for lists of firms offering certain products or services. Research organizations write for basic information which may be helpful to them in attempting to locate branch plant sites for industries they represent.

With the increased tempo of international trade, Klamath County gets its share of requests from business firms throughout the world that are anxious to find new markets for their products or services. Just this week a letter came from an exporter of "Real Pearls and Precious Stones" in Bombay, India.

Whatever final action results from these letters, one thing is certain: the story of Klamath County, its products and its services, is constantly being circulated around the nation, and even around the world, by your chamber of commerce.

Liz Feels Fine With Villain Tooth Extracted

LONDON (AP)—Actress Elizabeth Taylor is rid of one of the most expensive abscessed teeth in history.

"She's fine, just fine this morning," said her husband, Eddie Fisher in an interview. "Now that we finally know what caused that fever, she's getting ready to work again."

She arrived in Britain with her husband and three children Sept. 8 to play the starring role in Spyros Skouras' "Cleopatra."

She had her costume fittings and was getting ready to go on the set when she developed fever. It stumped her doctors for nearly two months.

Monday night she said to her husband: "My tooth aches."

Dr. Norbert Weinsberg took X-rays. Tuesday he pulled the offending tooth.

Never known for understatement, Skouras, president of 20th Century-Fox, said the tooth's cost to the studio was "very big, millions of dollars."

State Lawyer Is Arraigned

MEDFORD (AP)—O. H. Bengston, a Medford attorney who once served in the Oregon House of Representatives, Thursday was arraigned on eight separate counts of larceny by embezzlement.

The indictments involve a total of $6,295, said Gerald J. Scannel, deputy district attorney.

Ten indictments now have been returned against Bengston. On Oct. 12 he was convicted on the first of larceny of $3,700. His trial on the second indictment is scheduled for Dec. 13.
