

ANOTHER PHASE of American education is exhibited in this picture taken in the machine shop at KUHS. Here, a group of students receive instruction in the operation of a facing and center drill lathe. Left to right are Gary Hill, Richard Ford, Chester Rutledge, instructor William Harris, Gary Head and Don Estes.

A CLASS in Advanced Biology is shown at work. Those students planning to become doctors, nurses, dentists, laboratory technicians, biochemists, veterinarians or other related fields find Advanced Biology especially helpful. Students are encouraged to develop individual projects. Doctors and other specialists are called upon to talk to the classes in their specialized fields. During the year physiology and anatomy are stressed as small animals are dissected. Bacteriology, genetics, embryology and endocrinology are also studied.

THESE STUDENTS are working on designed layout projects in the advanced commercial art class taught by Howard Hall. Left to right, they are Jimmy Ison, Bob Myers, Janice Parr and Judy Paddock. The art program at KUHS offers five different courses for the elective student. Those students who wish to major in art may follow a full four-year program. Special courses in commercial art are offered second and third year students who wish to specialize. Instruction within the art department is geared as much to the individual student needs as possible. There are 12 periods of art and two instructors, Howard Hall and Lyle McIntosh.
