

Famous Names Pay Last Tribute To Clark Gable

GLENDAL, Calif. (AP)—The famous names who helped Clark Gable rule Hollywood in his golden age gathered Saturday to pay him last honors at a simple, quiet funeral.

Two hundred mourners filed into the Church of the Resurrection where Gable's casket lay amid banks of floral sprays. Three hundred spectators stood quietly a considerable distance from the church, and there were no displays of fan adulation that have marred other Hollywood funerals.

An American flag stood at the head of the rose-covered casket, and a squad of steel-helmeted airmen stood at attention outside the church, honoring Gable's service during World War II.

The famous names and Gable's lesser known coworkers in his 30 year of films sat listening to the organ strains of Strauss waltzes and Debussy. They heard the simple Episcopal service, including the 49th and 121st Psalms and 1 Corinthians 15.

The services were conducted by Air Force Chaplain John E. West. According to Episcopal tradition, there was no eulogy.

The ceremony was short and quiet, in accordance with Gable's wishes.

Entombment did not follow immediately. Forest Lawn officials said it might occur next week. Gable will lie in a crypt in the great mausoleum, scene of a stained glass reproduction of the Last Supper. The body will rest beside that of his third wife, Carole Lombard, and a place has been reserved for his widow, Kay Williams Gable.

Gable died last Wednesday night at 59 after suffering a coronary thrombosis 10 days earlier.

Judge Orders Assault Charge Back To Grand Jury For The Fourth Time

Circuit Judge David R. Vandenberg ordered the assault with a dangerous weapon charge against Leroy J. Kirk, 28, Chiloquin, back to the grand jury for the fourth time Friday afternoon, but indicated that he will not be as lenient in the future.

"A case should never be re-submitted to the grand jury more than once," the judge said. "From now on I'm not going to allow more than three resubmissions. Four and five are too many."

Kirk's attorney, former district attorney Arthur Beddoe, had earlier attacked the district attorney's office as "inept" in its handling of the case. Kirk has been in jail since August and hasn't yet entered a plea.

Friday, Richard Beesley, attorney for Ralph David Hutt, 30, Beatty, moved to quash the concealing stolen property indictment against his client on the grounds that there were unauthorized persons present during grand jury proceedings.

Beesley said District Attorney Dale T. Crabtree and deputy Max McMillin were both in the grand jury room during deliberations on Nov. 2. The law says a representative of the district attorney's office and one witness are allowed in the room at one time.

Jury Bailiff Mary DeLap was called to testify in support of Beesley's motion. She said she had stopped McMillin at the door to the room. She notified Crabtree, who was in the jury room and he came out and got McMillin. Then, she said, they both went into the room.

McMillin argued that the motion was too late (after entry of a plea) and also that the grand jury is only in session when it is transacting business. He said Crabtree introduced him to the jury and then left the room. Judge Vandenberg continued the matter until 10 a.m. Monday.

Pro-Westerners Favorite In Vote

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's pro-Western conservative government was rated a heavy favorite in Sunday's national election despite a body blow from the cutback in American military spending overseas.

Newspapers forecast the Liberal Democrats led by Prime Minister Hayato Ikeda would win 309 of the 467 seats in the new House of Representatives.

But President Eisenhower's order reducing spending by U.S. agencies overseas—and favoring American firms—was interpreted as a blow to Ikeda's policy of close alignment with the United States.

U.S. military spending has figured large in Japan's postwar boom and Ikeda has pegged his program of economic expansion to the American economy.

The Socialist party, which has been urging trade and diplomatic relations with Communist China, leaped onto the U.S. action as vindication of its position. Party leader Saburo Eda claimed "the U.S. economy is in a more serious situation than is generally believed."

Bystander Is Victim Of Squabble

NEWPORT, Ore. (AP) — A young couple argued over their estrangement Friday night. A bystander stepped in and was shot to death.

The dead man was Lawrence Bruce Ludahl, 18, thought to have been living recently at Sandy. He formerly lived in this area.

In jail, charged with first degree murder, was Jerry Wayne Gibson, 21, of Lebanon.

Also held temporarily was Mrs. Gibson, 17.

City Policeman Ron Sutton said this was the story pieced together in a night of interrogation:

The Gibsons were married last October but soon disagreements developed. A week ago Saturday they were visiting here and in the course of an argument she got out of their car and vanished. Gibson returned several times in search of her and reported to police that she was missing.

Friday night he drove over from Lebanon, where he was employed at the National Guard armory, and started looking again for his wife. At about 9:40 p.m. he saw her at a small dance room over the natatorium and skating rink.

Gibson stepped up to his wife and asked her to return home with him. She refused. Angry words followed.

Ludahl, an acquaintance of Mrs. Gibson for possibly a few days, stepped in and told Gibson to leave her alone. Gibson pulled out a pistol in what he said was an effort to frighten his wife into returning home with him.

But Ludahl grabbed the arm holding the gun.

Sutton said Gibson told him then that Ludahl jibed at him, saying he would not shoot.

"He kept saying go ahead and shoot. He kept saying it and saying it. Finally I pulled the trigger."

Ludahl fell, mortally wounded. Gibson gave himself up to police. It was not immediately clear who were Ludahl's parents or where he lived but Sutton said he thought he had been at Sandy.

OSC Queen Kidnapped, U Students Are Suspect

CORVALLIS (AP)—The Oregon State College Homecoming queen was kidnapped from the campus Friday afternoon but returned unharmed two hours later with a report — wholly expected — that University of Oregon students may have been responsible.

Ardis Henry of Seaside, queen of the Homecoming celebration which got under way Friday evening, said two young men lured her by ruse from her house, then forced her into a car, blindfolded her, and held her in a motel at the edge of town. She was unharmed. They did not identify themselves, she said Saturday, but she got the impression they were students from the rival institution at Eugene against which OSC played football Saturday.

Three years ago the OSC queen and two members of her court were kidnaped by University of Oregon students and taken to Salem before being released.

Miss Henry said she was assured that she would be freed as soon as the OSC student body president got started on the way to Eugene. He is Richard Seidem. Shortly after the abduction he got a note telling him to get on a motor scooter and ride to Eugene where the queen would be turned over to him. He told state police.

About 6 p.m. her captors called a taxi and sent Miss Henry to her home in time to join the evening's festivities.

Dist. Atty. John Fenner—who happens also to be OSC Alumni Association president — said civil authorities would take no note of the affair. "A college prank," he said, "and no one was hurt."

Coles from Prineville, Ore., was assessing the NRA's 29th annual convention which ended here Friday after rolling up a record attendance in excess of 1,000. The organization is made up of representatives of the 17 Western arid semi-arid states.

"While there were some disagreements among us, the problems were worked out among ourselves without a split in the Western unity that is so essential for furthering the cause of reclamation," said Coles.

The president, reelected for another year, stated the meeting was the most noncontroversial that he could recall. The most significant development in his view, was a standing vote of delegates to approve a recommendation that Floyd E. Dornay be retained as reclamation commissioner by the new Democratic administration — an unprecedented action.

Conservation Camp For Prisoners Will Be Started Near Fort Jones

FORT JONES—California Division of Forestry crews will soon

break ground for a conservation camp that will contain about 80 minimum security state prisoners five miles due north of here.

State Forest Ranger A. Roy Bengard, Yreka, who is in charge of CDF activities in Siskiyou County, said a "mobile camp" and crews will arrive about Nov. 28.

They will prepare the site—on a barren field near the confluence of Clear Creek and MacAdams Creek—for contractors who will begin building the camp as soon as weather permits next spring.

A deep well for the camp's water supply must be drilled, and the vanguard crews must level the site and dig utility and foundation trenches.

The crews will quarter in 17 huge trailer units that house complete facilities for a small community. Thirty men will be served.

The man who will run the camp when it is finished already has arrived. He is Project Supervisor Chuck Rolland, and he is looking for a home in Scott Valley.

His assistant, Richard Stanley, who is in charge of the mobile camp that will be moved from a job at Nubieber, has moved to a home in Fort Jones. At least two of the eight foremen that will handle the inmates have moved to the valley.

The state will let bids, probably in January, for camp construction. Any capable contractor is eligible to bid for the job.

Construction on the 140-acre site will cost an estimated $500,000, and the camp will contain about $300,000 worth of equipment. And it will be ready to go about next October.

Since the prisoners are the most trustworthy the state has screened, the camp will contain no walls—not even a fence. No rapists or killers or hardened criminals will work there.

Experience with the state's big network of such camps has shown that the rate of escape is so slight it is negligible, said Bengard.

The inmates are screened several times before they are allowed to work in a conservation camp. All have no more than a year of time to serve. Most have only a few months left, said Bengard.

The men who supervise them are specially trained and must pass civil service tests before they are placed on the job. Each foreman will work with about 10 men.

The biggest job the state has planned for the inmates is construction of a network of firebreaks in land protected by the CDF in Scott Valley.

The men will clear wide avenues through forest and brush land. They will clear litter on the forest floor, thin thickets and prune trees up to 20 feet from the ground. The network will enclose a series of forest plots, each containing from 3,000 to 10,000 acres. No merchantable timber will be felled.

Such a network gives firefighters a great advantage in stopping hot, running fires, said Bengard.

Secondary projects probably will include equipment painting, furniture repair and cement fireplace construction. The fireplaces are used in state parks.

Perishable foods will be bought locally when possible, Bengard said. In addition, local merchants will supply toilet articles and other personal effects that will be sold at a post exchange at the camp.

In addition to the project supervisor, his assistant and the foremen, the camp will employ a heavy equipment operator.

These men and their families all will obtain homes outside the camp, as close to the camp as possible.

Presumably, that means most will live in or around Fort Jones, if housing is available there.

The inmates are screened several times before they are al-
