

The Indestructible ARLENE FRANCIS

That certain something that defies time and disappointments abounds in this talented star

By VICTOR SEBASTIAN

Do you recognize her? It's Arlene Francis as a brunette femme fatale.

of people to help me. The Paar show is a much bigger challenge. There's no relief, nothing to guide you other than your own capacity to handle the guests."

Professional life, despite its intensity, comes second to the indestructible Arlene Francis. Her family comes first. She seldom misses having at least two meals a day with the men in her life, Martin and her 13-year-old son Peter. On the rare occasions when the three don't get together for meals, it's probably because Martin or Peter can't make it, not Arlene.

Even when she must be away, and she's strict about the must, she calls home every night. She believes in talking things over with Peter before a decision is reached and allowing him to make it, if at all possible.

"Sometimes," she says, "we have no more important decision to make than 'What position shall I go out for on the baseball team, Mom?' but I think I should always be available to discuss anything with my son."

"Peter is a very self-reliant boy for 13 since he has always had both parents working. But, after all, he is only 13, and there's a limit to how much he can or should shoulder on his own."

"He went away to school for the first time this fall, for instance. He was terribly homesick at first. I believe I helped him get over it by being there to tell him that he would have to put on a false face for a while and make believe he was enjoying it; that if he fought to keep this attitude, before long he would actually like it."

"It wasn't idle advice, either. I went through the same experience when I went to convent school at 11. I thought I'd die each day, but I kept on waking up every morning, and then one morning I woke up and decided that I liked it."

ARLENE often cooks at home although she has help in both her Park Avenue apartment and her Mt. Kisco, N.Y., home (both of which, she will tell you with housewifely pride, she decorated herself).

"Basically, I'm a meat and potatoes gal," she says, "but I do have one Armenian specialty that my uncle taught me when I was a little girl. I guess one of the reasons I cook is because Martin and Peter tell me that I'm the best cook in the world. Of course, they'd tell that to anyone who fed them, but I'd rather have them tell me."

What does the future hold for Arlene? "More of the same, I hope," she says. "We've had a wonderful life. Don't expect to hear any retirement announcements from me. I'll have to be forcibly retired."

If she's not indestructible, as some of her friends claim, she'll do until someone with more vitality comes along.
