

Pacifists Plan To Ride Into Path Of Polaris Sub

GROTON, Conn. (UPI) — Four pacifists plan to ride a canoe into the path of the Polaris missile-firing atomic submarine Ethan Allen Tuesday when she comes down the ways during a launching ceremony.

The quartet are members of the committee for nonviolent action, which has been holding demonstrations since June here and elsewhere in protest against this nation's missile program.

The four are Robert Swann, 43, of nearby Norwich, Joseph Glynn, 28, of Somerville, Mass., William Henry, 23, of Lodi, Wis., and Richard Zink, 20, of Amherst, Pa. They will conduct what they call a "civil disobedience" phase of the project, challenging arrest by authorities.

The same team was in Charleston, S.C. last week when the Pioneer Polaris missile sub George Washington left fully armed with 16 missiles for a two-year roving assignment. Henry dived into the Cooper River in an attempt to swim into the path of the submarine.

Besides the canoe, which will be in the Thames River, site of the Ethan Allen launching, there will be at least one other boat on picket duty. Other members will carry signs and distribute leaflets at the gates of the electric boat shipyard where the ceremony will take place.

"We're focusing attention on these submarines because the United States is relying on them for massive retaliation in case of attack," said CNVA member Kenneth Meister.

"We believe that massive retaliation is not the right way to handle our problems. It will wipe out civilization. Disarmament is the answer."

A Navy spokesman said the civil disobedience participants will not be arrested, as in the past, because it would only be giving them more publicity.

Last week, however, the Navy sent the group a letter warning that if members attempted to board a Polaris submarine they would face a one year jail sentence and/or a $15,000 fine. CNVA followers boarded two such vessels briefly last month in an attempt to set up a "peace vigil."

The spokesman said that the "usual precautions" will be taken Tuesday, as in all submarine launchings, to insure no one will be injured. They include Coast Guard patrol boats, and Marine and company guards on electric boat property.

Hoffa Being Investigated Again By Congress, Court

By NORMAL WALKER

WASHINGTON (AP)—James R. Hoffa, much-investigated head of the big Teamsters Union, is being investigated again by both Congress and the courts.

Sen. John L. McClellan, D-Ark., announced Saturday he expects to show in a series of hearings opening Dec. 13 that "notorious underworld criminals and racketeers continue to control" Teamsters locals under Hoffa's rule.

Hoffa himself is expected to be called for testimony at the hearings, which will concentrate on New York City union operations, some of which were said to be still under the control of hoodlum Anthony (Tony Ducks) Corallo.

McClellan said the hearings will concern shakedowns, payroll padding and union welfare fund irregularities.

A federal grand jury at Orlando, Fla., ended a six-month recess and was suddenly reconvened several days ago in an inquiry into Hoffa's alleged misuse of $400,000 of Teamsters' funds in a Florida real estate project.

Hoffa actively opposed the election of John F. Kennedy to the presidency, attacking both the Massachusetts senator and his brother, Robert, who served as chief counsel for another McClellan Senate committee which investigated Hoffa vigorously.

There has been a Democratic charge that the grand jury inquiry in Florida was suspended by the Republicans so Hoffa would be free to campaign against Kennedy.

Jerome Adelman, associated with Robert Kennedy in the earlier probe, is counsel for the Senate investigations subcommittee that will hold the new set of hearings.

The reopened court and congressional investigations come at a bad time for Hoffa. His attorneys have been on the brink of suc-

The Levi Leap Held At School

TULELAKE—The Levi Leap at Tulelake High School Oct. 29 was held in the home economics building at the Tulelake Fairgrounds.

The dance is always informal and girls and boys both wear levis and shirts. Couples going steady wear identical shirts. Girls ask the boys and buy the tickets.

Refreshments were served by the sophomore class which sponsored the dance.

Class advisers, Virginia Lindsey, John Quinn and Hank Smith chaperoned.

Magnetic Changes May Be Indicator

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Soviet scientists suggest that brief changes in the earth's magnetic field provide "a delicate indicator" of atomic explosions above the atmosphere.

The Red scientists also say their ground instruments recorded magnetic field changes caused by U.S. nuclear space shots in 1958. However, they do not claim that they immediately interpreted the recorded changes as indications of atomic explosions.

This was disclosed in a Russian article on the U.S. Argus and Johnston Island nuclear experiments. A translation was distributed here by the Commerce Department.

In the Argus project, three small atomic bombs were rocketed into the sky and exploded about 300 miles above the South Atlantic in August and September, 1958. In August of the same year, two H-bombs were exploded at lower altitudes, 47 and 27 miles above Johnston Island in the Pacific.

According to the Soviet article, Russian stations in the U.S.S.R. and Antarctica recorded magnetic field disturbances attributed to the atomic experiments.

The Argus shots spread an electrical shell over the globe along the lines of force of the planet's magnetic field. The lower Johnston Island shots, fired aloft by Redstone missiles, had a less extensive effect, although they were far more powerful. Both produced auroral displays and brief effects on radio communications.
