Ann displayed the oldest school book, a chemistry science volume printed in 1862. She is a fifth grader and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Murel Long. The contest, in observance of Book Week, November 14-18, was suggested by Mrs. Lucille West, second grade teacher. Winners received 50 cent cash prizes. Other entries by Mrs. Joe Lee, sixth grade teacher, and Mrs. Ernest Watts drew comment. Mrs. Lee's book, not in competition, was a volume of Logarithmic and Trigonometric tables dated 1830. Mrs. Watts' entry was a hymn book in German printed 130 years ago.

Editor Predicts Changes

CHICAGO (UPI) — Newspapers will change more during the next 40 years than they did in the first 60 years of this century. Earl J. Johnson, vice president and editor of United Press International, predicted Monday night.

Johnson told the 36th annual conference of the Associated Collegiate Press that the winds of change sweeping the world at the beginning of the 1960s are bound to affect journalism as they already have the field of science.

"All of us are going to have our hands full keeping up with scientific discoveries, understanding them and developing the writing skills so that we can help other people understand them too," he said. "Not the mathematical formulas, but how these discoveries have rearranged our environment."

"People's tastes and interests are changing. Nineteen sixty-one may be the year when we send a man into outer space. It is a safe prediction, I think, that newspapers and news media of all kinds will change more in the remainder of the century than they have in the first 60 years.

"Even the American language is changing, not only with the introduction of new words like 'count-down' and 'launching pad,' but perhaps with a new orientation."

Johnson said that it is more important now for journalists to master good news writing than it was in previous generations because there are so many more vitally important things to report now than ever before.

The UPI already is embarking in a new direction in the writing of some stories, he said. What is called the "blue ribbon technique" has been developed to eliminate the hackneyed second-day approach taken in the writing of many news stories, he said.

Administration Faces Emergency Action In Protecting Gold Supply

Editor's Note—Secretary of the Treasury Robert B. Anderson is in Europe this week, seeking foreign help in stemming the heavy drain on the U. S. gold stockpile. This is one of a series of steps taken in an effort to solve a worrisome international problem. Other steps, present and potential, are discussed in this last of three articles by Frank Cormier from his experience as AP Treasury Department reporter and financial writer.

Finally, foreigners in 1959 invested $500 million in the United States on a long-term basis. It's questionable whether the U. S. economy is growing fast enough at present to warrant much of an increase.

There you have the major items which work to reduce the payments deficit. There's room for improvement all along the line here—but you can't throw a switch and expect dramatic results.

On the deficit side, the biggest item in 1959 was the $18.8 billion which Americans spent to import civilian goods and services. One way to reduce the deficit would be to restrict imports through quotas or higher tariffs. However, that would inspire retaliation against U. S. exports. The government has done nothing in this area.

By FRANK CORMIER

WASHINGTON (AP)—For more than a year, the Eisenhower administration has been fussing around the edges of the gold problem. Now it is getting down to brass tacks.

Why the sudden emphasis on emergency action when Uncle Sam still owns $18 billion of gold—about half of the free world's total supply?

It's largely a matter of arithmetic.

First of all, $11.5 of Uncle Sam's gold is tied up by law. It can't leave the country because it backs up part of the U. S. money supply.

That leaves $6.5 billion of gold to meet foreign demands—the demand which the United States must satisfy at all times if the dollar is to remain "as good as gold."

These, then, are the areas in which the government can act to reduce the deficit and stem the loss of gold.

Some say the administration has already done more than is necessary. Others believe more will have to be done in the future.

It's a debate which will continue in the months ahead; a debate on which the future of the dollar and the free world economy may depend.

President Eisenhower has decided that the second and third alternatives are necessary.

The next category is overseas spending under military programs—a $3.1 billion item last year.

In this area, the administration has ordered the gradual return of more than half the 484,000 wives and children who accompany U. S. servicemen to overseas posts. Because these people spend millions overseas, the action is being taken despite its effect on morale.

Also, the government will try to shift more military spending to the United States and persuade the Europeans to pay a larger share of European defense costs.

Agency Declines Okay On Power Plant Proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Interior Department Tuesday dumped cold water on two proposals for building power plants on a stretch of the Snake River where it forms the border between Idaho and Oregon.

Undersecretary Elmer F. Bennett, in a letter to Chairman Jerome Kuykendall of the Federal Power Commission, said a proposed treaty with Canada would permit other major hydroelectric development on the Columbia River system.

Referring to the proposed High Mountain Sheep or Nez Perce sites on the Snake, Bennett said: "We believe it is unnecessary at this time and for some years to come to undertake any project in this area."

Bennett said this would provide needed time which could be devoted to further efforts to solve fishery problems posed by applications to build plants at the two sites.

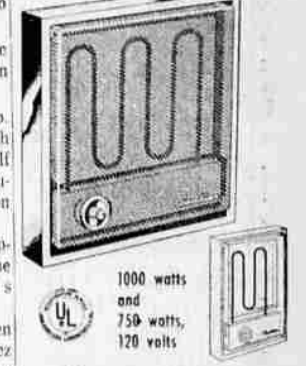

An FPC hearing involving the two conflicting applications is in recess until next Monday.

Pacific Northwest Power Co. seeks a license to build the High Mountain Sheep plant one-half mile upstream from the confluence of the Snake and Salmon rivers.

Washington Public Power Supply System proposes to build the Nez Perce project 2½ miles downstream.

Bennett said that as between the two proposed dams, the Nez Perce project would have greater impact on anadromous fish—those that go upstream from oceans to breed, such as salmon.

He suggested both projects be deferred while full advantage is taken of the opportunity for water storage and power development presented by the proposed treaty with Canada.
