

Legislature Awaits Rule Of Judges

NEW ORLEANS (UPI)—A defiant Louisiana Legislature and an uneasy New Orleans citizenry today waited impatiently for a three-judge federal panel to rule on whether the city's public schools could return to racial segregation.

The three-judge court, which includes Judges J. Skelly Wright, the man who ordered integration, has been pondering the case since Monday when the harried school board pleaded for the return to segregation.

The board, caught in the middle of a state declaration of interposition and the adamant Judge Wright, wants to de-integrate until it is determined if the state or federal government will call the shots regarding operation of the schools.

Louisiana's segregationist Legislature has addressed out of office the members of the school board and fired the New Orleans school superintendent. They remain in office because of a federal injunction halting the Legislature from interfering with integration.

Four 6-year-old Negro girls enrolled in two previously all-white schools — William Frantz and McDonogh 19 — apparently will return to empty classrooms Monday when school resumes after a week-long Thanksgiving and teacher convention holiday.

Only five white students out of an enrollment of more than 1,000 have been attending the two integrated schools. Irate parents who refuse to permit their children to go to school with Negroes are enrolling them in neighboring St. Bernard Parish (county), which is not affected by the federal integration order.

The parents of Ruby Nell Bridges, the lone Negro girl attending the Frantz school, said she did not have a book at the Negro school she attended before transferring.

Her 26-year-old mother, who got only an eighth grade education, said Ruby will remain at Frantz "come what may." She said, "colored schools may be separate but they ain't necessarily equal." Ruby's father, Abon, 29, was fired from his service station job for sending his daughter to a "white school." He was a corporal in the 45th Infantry Division in Korea and won a Purple Heart when he was wounded "trying to tote a wounded white man out."
