

Southern Pacific Lists WP Control Advantages

Faster, better and lower-cost railroad services for the public are advantages which would be gained by Southern Pacific control of Western Pacific, SP declared today.

The railroad listed these five major reasons why "Southern Pacific's proposal best serves the public interest":

1. Coordination of SP-WP operations would provide faster service over the lines of both roads, speed up switching service, and provide better car distribution to industries.
2. Freight rates would be kept at lowest possible levels, through reduction of railroad operating costs and use of the most efficient facilities of each company.
3. Present WP routes and service features and benefits of competition would be retained, as the two roads would continue as separate entities, each serving its customers and continuing to "aggressively seek traffic against all competition," including each other. Chief competitors of all railroads are now other modes of transportation, SP comments.
4. More efficient operations and better earnings would put both the WP and SP "in stronger position to move forward with their service and equipment improvement programs."
5. Various communities would benefit where SP-WP coordination would offer "opportunities to ease vehicular traffic problems by removal of mainline rail operations from principal streets."

Three Malin Boys Named

Three Malin High School students, Don Stastny, Conrad Johnson and Bob Brown, have been named to a High School Advisory Committee to the Attorney General on Crime Prevention. James B. Conroy will serve as faculty adviser.

The Malin High School committee will join similar groups in high schools throughout the state in aiding the attorney general's Experimental Program for the Prevention of Crime (EPPCC).

The EPPCC program, first of its kind in the nation, was inaugurated last spring after a statewide crime conference called by Atty. Gen. Robert Y. Thornton and attended by 150 experts in all fields related to crime prevention.

Out of this grew the Citizens Advisory Committee on Crime Prevention, of which the high school groups will be a part. Recommendations of this committee will be coordinated and put into action by a crime prevention division in the State Department of Justice.

First duties of the high school committees will include enumerating all agencies in their communities which are engaged in some form of crime prevention, and evaluating their effectiveness in the prevention of crime and delinquency.

Two Women Injured In Accident

State police said a three-car accident on Highway 97 just north of the California border Friday evening resulted in injuries to two Washington women.

They were Mrs. Rose Ann Olson, 55, Amber, and Mrs. Elsie Mae Hodges, Richland. Mrs. Olson was released Monday from Klamath Valley Hospital, Klamath Falls, and Mrs. Hodges was scheduled for release soon, hospital personnel indicated.

Officers said a sedan driven by John William Hodges, Richland, apparently went into a slide on a hillside and turned broadside. A pickup truck driven by Robert William Orabood, 1531 McClellan Drive, Klamath Falls, struck the car and was hit, in turn, by a car operated by William Victor Duncan, Anderson, Calif., officers said.
