

New Park, Recreation Supervisor Is Named

Gary Woodring, 23, is the new city park and recreation department supervisor, replacing Fred Friedel, who resigned recently to study at the University of Oregon.

Woodring's appointment was announced by George Price, department director, recently. Woodring began work Dec. 1.

His job is to organize and conduct major community programs for people of all ages and interests, says Price. He also supervises operation of the community center in Klamath Auditorium.

GARY WOODRING

Woodring was born in Yankton S.D., and came to Oregon when he was 9 years of age. He attended public schools in Corvallis and was graduated from Oregon State College in June with a bachelor of science degree in education recreation.

In the interim, he has been working with a chain grocery store firm at Corvallis.

Beet Sugar Increase Urged

YAKIMA (AP)—An increase of an unspecified amount in the beet sugar quota was urged Friday by the National Beet Growers Federation as it ended a meeting here.

The federation also said increased production will bring new marketing problems and greater costs and urged that these be considered in administration of any new legislation.

Congress was urged to extend the Sugar Act for nine months from its March 31 expiration date and then work toward long-term legislation recognizing "the need for increased reliance on domestically produced sugar."

The federation asked Congress to continue the Mexican farm labor program, saying the domestic supply of labor is inadequate in some areas.

CHAMBER COMMENTS

by GEORGE T. CALLISON
Manager
KLAMATH COUNTY CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Another of the chamber's committees, organized for action this week, is the Local and State Affairs Committee, again this year under the direction of Frank Tarr, and again chairmanned by L. Orin Sisemore.

On the local and state level, this committee is the counterpart of the National Affairs-Congressional Action Committee, discussed last week. Shortly before the state Legislature convenes, and throughout the legislative session, this committee will study all major bills, particularly those that have any bearing on Klamath County. In instances where this study indicates that a stand should be taken by the chamber, this committee will transmit its recommendations to the chamber's Board of Directors. Before the Legislature convenes in January, the committee plans to schedule a meeting with Klamath's legislative delegation, Sen. Harry Boivin and Representatives George Flitcraft and Carol Howe, principally for an exchange of information so that the chamber committee will know the thinking of the legislators on major legislative programs and so that the legislators will better understand the background of any chamber opinions or recommendations for action that may come to them during the session.

In addition to this vitally important assignment, the Local and State Affairs Committee is charged with maintaining liaison between the city and county governments and the business and professional community on any problems of mutual concern. And if all this sounds like a big job, it is, but it's the sort of job any strong chamber of commerce must undertake if it is to discharge its responsibility to the community it serves. It's the sort of job, also, that can best be handled through the diversified human resources available in the time and minds of chamber committee members.

Eleven Henley students who took the national educational development tests last spring are eligible for certificates for top scores on these tests. The results were announced recently.

The juniors who qualified include Judy Bumgardner, Susan Tubach, Coleen Finchum, Vicki Fairchild, Karl Kipping and Peggy Martin.

Harvey Kammerer, Martha Ragland, Lydia Umlor and Tom Landers are the sophomores eligible to receive certificates.

Certificates of educational development were provided for students scoring in the top quarter of all participants, in each state, by grade. The composite percentile is used to determine eligibility.

In our own state each person who was at or above the 96 percentile as a sophomore was eligible to receive a certificate. Last year's freshmen needed to score in the 93 percentile.

Bilyeu, Waddell Named Kingsley's Prize Crew

One of the veteran pilots of the 322nd Fighter - Interceptor Squadron and a repeat performer in the best seat have been named "Aircrew of the Month" at Kingsley Field.

First Lt. Lowell D. Bilyeu, with the 322nd for three years, is the pilot, and 1st Lt. David B. Waddell, honored as the squadron's outstanding radar intercept officer in July, are the select crew.

Rounding out honors for this month is the "Crew Chief of the Month," Airman I.C. Sammy D. Hallock, of the 40th Consolidated Maintenance Squadron.

Lieutenant Bilyeu, a native of Oklahoma, has an admirable string of 34 consecutive "kills" against target aircraft on combat training missions. He attended Oklahoma State University in Stillwater and received his wings through the Aviation Cadet Program. He has logged over 900 hours in the F-86, T-33 and F-101B. Lieutenant Bilyeu and his wife, Alice, live in Falcon Heights with their daughter, Dana.

Lieutenant Waddell, who served as an airman in Iceland before entering Aviation Cadet Program, is from Lebanon, Pa. He is a bachelor and lives in the Rickfalls Apartments, Lt. Col. Carl H. Leo, 322nd commander, summed up Lieutenant Waddell's performance this way:

"Lieutenant Waddell's record, since he was assigned to our squadron last January, reflects great credit upon his ability and indicates a promising career in the Air Force."

Airman Hallock, chosen the outstanding ground crewman, is also from Oklahoma (Norman). He arrived at Kingsley Field from Hamilton Air Force Base in April, 1959. He and his wife, June, and daughter, Linda, live at 1724 Johnson Street, Klamath Falls.

Howe, Flitcraft Huddle With Board On Stands

State Representatives Carol Howe and George Flitcraft met with two county commissioners Friday afternoon to discuss pending and suggested legislation.

County Commissioners Frank Ganong and Ed Gowen presented their views on legislative proposals supported by the Association of Oregon Counties. Commissioner-elect E. K. (Ken) Allison also attended the meeting. County Judge Bob Walker was at a meeting of the state Highway Commission in Salem.

The commissioners asked the representatives for strong support in the area of public welfare and taxation and finance.

Ganong, who was a member of the association's public welfare committee, advocated a plan to require that at least two of the seven members of the state Public Welfare Commission be county judges or commissioners, and that at least one member be an appointive member of a county public welfare commission.

"This would give counties representation in proportion to the welfare funds they pay," Ganong said. He also gave support to a measure which would allow the counties to review and comment on fiscal year welfare allocations before final adoption by the state commission. Another plan would permit disclosure to bona fide credit associations of whether or not a credit applicant is a welfare recipient.

In the area of taxation and finance, the commissioners advocated a law to require appraisal of farm land at agricultural values, regardless of the usage or potential usage of adjacent properties. Two other AOC-supported measures would provide that the state, instead of the counties, pay the salaries of circuit court reporters and pay attorneys' fees and costs in post-conviction relief cases.

Other AOC proposals backed by the commissioners included:

1. Amend the state constitution to permit computation of tax base on "the last three years in which a tax was levied" instead of the three "immediately preceding years."
2. Issue bonds to finance local county street or sidewalk improvements instead of financing through the county road fund.

3. Repeal the statute which requires counties to employ a certified appraiser for each 30 million dollars true cash value of locally assessed property.

4. Repeal requirement that counties must publish a detailed list of expenditures every month.

Grandmother Is Facing Deportation

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—A Seattle grandmother who faces deportation because she belonged to the Communist party more than 20 years ago awaited today a federal court decision in her case.

The U. S. Court of Appeals Friday took under submission the case of Mrs. Hazel Anna Wolf, 62, who came to the United States at the age of 10.

She has been ordered deported to Great Britain because her native country, Canada, says she lost her Canadian citizenship when she married a U. S. citizen.

One of her attorneys, Sigfried Hesse of Berkeley, Calif., told the court Friday that deportation constituted punishment which would be unconstitutional in a civil proceeding. He said the Constitution guarantees the right to trial by jury before such punishment can be legally imposed.

But Charles Gordon, a government attorney, said the courts had rejected on numerous occasions the contention that deportation is a form of punishment.

Buried Cash Disappears

PORTLAND (AP)—Alfred Walter Hoveland, 53, told sheriff's deputies that his buried treasure of $5,000 has vanished.

He said he put the money, which included $90 in gold coins, in a fruit jar and buried it under his house. He said he checked two years ago and the money was still there.

About 86 per cent of the out-of-state visitors to Arkansas in 1959 came by automobile.

Dentistry Service Will Be Reviewed

SALEM (AP)—Atty. Gen. Robert Y. Thornton said Thursday his office will review an opinion holding a dental service plan offered by Dental Service, Inc., illegal.

The opinion released last week held that the plan constituted the practice of dentistry by a corporation not licensed to practice dentistry.

Thornton scheduled the review after attorneys for the corporation contended the opinion failed to take into account certain additional facts.

"This is our normal practice whenever a complaint is made by any citizen adversely affected by a ruling or opinion of this office," Thornton said.

"We always hear the complainant's objections and review the opinion for possible error of facts or law."

Robert J. Yeoman, president of Dental Service Inc., said of Portland he was pleased with the decision to review.

"We are convinced, as is our legal counsel, that when all the facts are available to the attorney general, it will be established beyond doubt that our conduct is completely legal. We certainly have no quarrel as to the illegality of a corporation practicing dentistry, but we are in no way engaged in such practice. Our participating dentists . . . are the only ones to do that. This crucial fact was apparently missing from the material available to the attorney general's office," he said.
