

Bridge Plan Prohibited

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — Construction of a proposed bridge across the Columbia River at Government Island is prohibited by Washington state law, Atty. Gen. John J. O'Connell said today.

A statute bars construction of new crossings within 10 miles of an existing toll bridge as long as the toll span bonds are outstanding, he said.

The proposed crossing would be 1/2 miles upstream from the Vancouver-Portland Interstate toll bridges.

The only way the Government Island crossing could be legally built would be with consent of holders of the Vancouver bridge bonds, O'Connell said.

He declined to say whether the state of Oregon could legally construct the proposed Government Island span.

Nyasaland Lad Nears U.S. Goal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legson Kayira was slightly cool when he arrived in Washington Saturday night from Africa on his way to Skagit Valley Junior College in the state of Washington.

The sight of snow seemed to startle him. He was coatless.

Kayira, who left home in Karonga, Nyasaland, Oct. 14, 1958, and started walking to America, expects to leave Washington late Monday for the West Coast.

He had only a desire to go to school in America when he left Karonga—that desire and a good command of English and a secondary education received at a missionary school in Karonga.

Kayira, who believes he is between 18 and 20, made two stops on the long walk through Africa. One was a brief stay in Tanganyika and the other was about a year in Kampala, Uganda. There he first learned about the little college in Mount Vernon, Wash. He was in a library and picked up a book which described American colleges.

"Skagit was the first college I saw," he said, "so I wrote a letter there asking to be admitted."

He was, but he didn't have any money to finance his trip. So two USA officers, Henry S. Hudson and Eugene Friedmann, took an interest in his case, and began asking people in the United States to help raise money for Kayira.

A month ago, enough to guarantee his well being arrived.

Last Friday, when he left Kharfoum, it was 110 degrees, and Kayira was wearing only a shirt and shorts. Friedmann gave him a suit and some other clothes. He was put on a plane for London where he took another flight to the United States.

"My Darling Nellie Gray" was composed by Benjamin Russel Handby, who was born in Rushville, Ohio.
