Cue Lipstick To Costume

By ALICIA HART
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Nothing is quite as ghastly as the wrong shade of lipstick with the right dress. Bright red lipstick, for instance, with this year's fashionable purple. The combination just couldn't be worse.

Yet many women are so used to one lipstick shade that they stay with it no matter what the seasonal changes in color. Thus, they deny themselves the fun of experimenting, of seeing what a new color will do both for their skin and their clothes.

Knowing this, one major beauty house has brought out delightful temptation to try in the form of five lipstick shades packaged in a single plastic wand. Slim as a pencil, the wand is just five inches long. Each plastic section is colored to correspond to the lipstick it contains.

The shades are a pastel pink, a vibrant pink, a brilliant coral, a blue-red, and a medium red.

In the reception room were two lighted miniature Christmas trees and in the lodge room a scene of the Nativity was placed on the piano.

The meeting was preceded by several selections sung by the Barbershop Quartet and the Sweet Adelines.

Following the entertainment the meeting was opened with Mrs. Phyllis May and William Goen, royal matron and royal patron, presiding in the east.

Plans were made for the official visit of Wilber Sherry, grand lecturer of the Grand Court, Order of the Amaranth of Oregon, at the Jan. 18 meeting. It is also obligation night. Plans were also made for initiation of candidates.

Mrs. Florence Briggs, sewing chairman, announced there would not be any sewing until January.

A Christmas party followed the closing of the meeting. Large arrangements of greens gave a festive holiday atmosphere to the lovely banquet room. Gifts were exchanged from a lighted tree. The handmade rug was presented to Mrs. Jacqueline Carter.

The committee in charge of the evening were Al Angel, Mrs. Leona Angel and Mrs. Martha Powell.
