Lou Ann Kandra, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. Lewis Kandra of Malin, became the bride of Henry Wilkins, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Wilkins of Olex, Ore., Nov. 26 in the First Presbyterian Church in Klamath Falls.

The young couple recited their vows in a double ring ceremony read by the Rev. John Welch of St. George's Church of Roseburg. Approximately 200 guests were present for the three o'clock ceremony.

Green woodwardia fronds were the background for two urn type baskets arranged with a fountain of natural wheat and sprays of bronze chrysanthemums and yellow pompons. Red leaves cascaded from candelabra holding tall lighted white tapers. Golden wheat, red croton leaves and red-dish lemon leaves tied with gold satin bows marked the pews along the aisle.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She was beautiful in a gown of hand clipped Chantilly lace and rayon tulle with a scalloped apron effect. The long sleeved bodice was styled with a scalloped Sabrina neckline accented with pearls and sequins. Tiers of lace on the skirt cascaded to a chapel train. The fingertip veil of illusion was held in place by a crown of seed pearls and rhinestones. The bride's bouquet was fashioned of white butterfly roses and stephanotis encircling a white cattleya orchid with long ribbon bows. The bride also carried her Rainbow Bible which held a picture of her brother, who is stationed in Germany. Her only jewelry was a single strand of pearls, gift of the bridegroom. Traditional pieces were the lucky penny in her slipper and a blue garter.

Sheryl Casady, college friend of the bride from Palo Alto, was a maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Judy Irwin of Canby, Ore.; Tocy Lamb of Chico, niece of the bridegroom; Donna Westbrook of Portland, and Mrs. Ron Stephens of Hermiston, cousin of the bride.

Junior bridesmaids were Sharon Micka and Connie Unis, both cousins of the bride from Malin.

All attendants wore identical dresses of honey gold featuring velveteen bodices with square necklines. The satin skirts were bell shaped with two Dutch boy pleats and pleated cummerbunds. Each wore a narrow halo headband of gold satin with brief veil of gold net accented with amber jewels. Bracelets of amber rhinestones were gifts of the bride. The bride's gifts to the junior

MR. AND MRS. OWEN J. HAYHURST were married recently at St. Frances Cabrini Catholic Church in Los Angeles. She is the former Charlotte Noble, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Noble of Bonanza. Soroptimists Host Christmas Luncheon

Klamath Falls Soroptimist Club, sponsored by Soroptimist members and other guests were present Dec. 22 for a Christmas luncheon at the Winema Hotel. Mrs. Claudia Moore was chairman of the day.

Melody Mothers, directed by Mrs. W. Don Miller, presented a repertoire of Christmas music. Mrs. William Campbell was accompanist.

Mrs. Julia Brown, administrator, Klamath County Welfare Commission gave a report on the trial store operated this year for parents who seek aid during the holidays for children.

A Christmas greeting was read with ribbons and sprays of tiny acorns.

For the honeymoon trip Mrs. Wilkins wore a light gray and beige knit suit with cocoa brown hat, bronze shoes and bone white accessories. Amber crystals and the orchid from her bouquet completed her ensemble.

The bride is a graduate of Malin High School and has attended Lewis and Clark for three years. She was the 1955 Potato Festival queen. Her husband, a graduate of The Dalles High School, is a senior at Lewis and Clark College and is affiliated with Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity.

Out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Louis Unis, Mr. and Mrs. David Hitchman and Scott, Mrs. David Bauman, Mr. and Mrs. Don Welcom, Mr. and Mrs. Monte Voight, Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Westbrook and Mrs. Richard Ladeen, all of Portland; Mr. and Mrs. Lacey Hollister, Calgary, Alberta, Canada; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kolsky and Lauris, Ken McFarland, Salem; Carl Wilcox, Sacramento; Scott Eaton of Rochester, New York; Mrs. George Irwin of Canby; Dr. and Mrs. Sterling Rood and Shelly, Carrie and Stephanie of Chico; Dr. and Mrs. Charles E. Wilson and Denis, Tommy, Robby and Johnny, Fairfield; Paul Micka of The Dalles; Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Wilkins of La Grande; Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Wilkins, Florence; Mrs. George Rudd, Seattle; Mr. and Mrs. Charley Davis and Gayle, Eugene; Mr. and Mrs. John Richardson and Nancy and John of Madras.

After the wedding the bride's parents were dinner hosts for out-of-town guests in the Pelican-Party Room.

Mr. and Mrs. Lester Wilkins entertained members of the wedding party and guests at a rehearsal dinner at the Yacht Club. Mrs. Wilkins decorated the head table with twin heart-shaped cakes in shades of brown and yellow iced with the names "Lou Ann-Hunk." The unusual centerpiece, a bronze candle tree covered with miniature lighted candles, was made by a relative of the Wilkins family.

The newlyweds are at home in Portland following a honeymoon trip to San Francisco and Carmel.

from a young woman in India, Mrs. R. Kanthimathi, who with her husband was in the United States as an exchange student during the year that Dena Backes was president of the Klamath Falls Soroptimist Club. A group of local members met the visitor from abroad during session of the Northwest Region Conference in Olympia, and at that time learned that funds for the young couple were running low. Various clubs, including Klamath Falls, raised money to supplement a scholarship given to the young woman by the region.

Her letter to the club follows: "To Our Most Beloved Ones—Although most of us here do not celebrate Christmas, we cannot help thinking of you and your family during this festive season. My husband and I wish you a Merry Christmas and a very Happy New Year.

"Years are flying but our memories of your land are evergreen. It is four years since we returned from your country but we are never tired of talking about your affection and hospitality toward us. Love and friendship know no national boundaries and so we have never felt that you are foreign to us. When even the most enlightened statesmen of the world are standing on the grounds of prestige and power-politics, we have to strengthen our ties of love and friendship, which we are sure will ultimately lead to peace on earth. Let us all pray that the New Year should show us a more Godly path and make it a turning point for humanity.

"Ever since I returned here in September, 1956, I am in the above school (Presidency High School, Madras, India) and my husband, Ram, is still in the High Court Service of Madras State.

"We, in India, feel happy that in the recent past, our countries come still closer in understanding and friendship. From the time we achieved independence, we are still struggling and working hard to better our standard of living through perfect Democratic means. God Bless us.

"During this particular season, we are praying for your welfare and for your national prosperity, which is most important to the whole of humanity.

"We are looking forward to the day when we will meet again and have a wonderful time together.

"Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year with love and all good wishes."

Rhoda Harnden presided. Tables were centered with arrangements of red carnations, native greens and lighted Christmas tapers.

A Dutch 'Fair Lady'

At last, it has happened! "My Fair Lady" has come to Holland! For years the polyglot Dutch have been singing the familiar English songs and the airwaves have been humming with selections of the show. Traveling Dutchmen have made a point of obtaining tickets for the original New York performance and the London show a couple of years later. Now, at last, Holland has her own production—in Dutch version, mind you.

It is this Dutch version that had caused some apprehension among critics before the play opened in Rotterdam. How could it ever succeed, they wondered. The play is so essentially Anglo-Saxon; its scenes are so typically, its story so overwhelmingly, English; its language and dialogue are so deliberately, its humor so traditionally, Anglo-Saxon.

Well—nobody need have worried. The reviews found the critics running out of favorable adjectives. And here, as though to prove the point, is what an English critic—H. George Franks—has to say about it. He begins by eating his own words, expressed on a former occasion about the Dutch ability of staging a show. "Holland has marvelously regained her reputation," he says, "and she has even surprised her own countrymen by the way it has been done. The Dutch production in Rotterdam has certainly met all the detailed and precise specifications in performing 'My Fair Lady.' It is proving a remarkable success."

Mr. Franks goes on to explain that Shaw's Pygmalion has been played in Holland in Dutch many times. But that text could at best only be used as a basis for the translation of the dialogue. It could, however, give the producers an idea of the type of actors to choose for the leading roles; and the results have shown that they made the most of that opportunity. Wim Sonneveld as Professor Higgins was well known and very popular, and so was Johan Kaart as Father Doolittle. But Margriet de Groot, chosen for Eliza Doolittle, was the surprise. At 22 the youngest Eliza of all "My Fair Lady" productions, she has already been hailed by some as the Cockney girl's double. And if the show is in for a long run—as it is expected to be—her thorough education might stand her in good stead.

BE STINGY The commonest cause of lipstick smears is carrying the color into the corners of the mouth and not blotting the lipstick there. Color should be sparingly applied to the corners with a lip brush and blotted down.
