

Coroner Position Ends In 21 Oregon Counties

SALEM (AP) — Effective today, 21 Oregon counties will have medical examiners and will abolish the post of county coroner. The new post will be handled by the county health officer.

The job of laying the ground work of this changeover has rested in the hands of Dr. William L. Lidbeck.

Dr. Lidbeck, pathologist for the Oregon State Hospital, stepped into the post of state medical examiner, part time, when the state was unable to fill it.

Civil Service Director M. E. Cleveland said he now has no applicants for the post that pays $15,420 annually. He cannot offer more because policy dictates it must be lower than the department head. In this case this is the state health officer, Dr. Richard H. Wilcox, who is paid $15,500.

The state originally hoped for a forensic pathologist — a doctor trained in pathology and legal medicine. Cleveland said the state probably will be forced to settle for a pathologist.

He said he wrote to various state and local governments to find what they were paying forensic pathologists and Houston replied that it was offering $20,000 for a second man and had been unable to fill the post.

The Board of Control and the Board of Health arranged for Dr. Lidbeck to work three days a week in each of his two posts to get the program started at the time set by the legislature.

Since his appointment in November, Dr. Lidbeck has spent two weeks outside the state for schooling in forensic pathology and much time traveling to the 21 counties.

Eventually the program will embrace all of the state's counties except Multnomah. The remaining counties will come under it Jan. 1, 1963, with one a year later.

Wilcox said the program head will train county medical examiners to present cases to court, devise investigation procedure and train county officials in preserving medical evidence.

Gov. Mark O. Hatfield proposed a $136,146 budget for the program in the next biennium. This includes $56,894 for the salaries of the director and a stenographer, chemist and laboratory assistant.

Major equipment purchases include a laboratory at $15,000. There is $13,600 for autopsies.

The recommendation said experience shows 20 per cent of the deaths in Oregon, excluding Multnomah County deaths, or an estimated 2,605 will require investigation. It estimated the number of autopsies at 363.

"All the cases that are investigated have to come to the office of chief medical officer," Dr. Lidbeck said. "We will examine all of those, code them and classify them. Then on the basis of how these examinations are being conducted recommendations may be required on my part and perhaps changes."

The 21 counties where the change is effective with the new years are Baker, Benton, Clatsop, Columbia, Deschutes, Douglas, Gilliam, Grant, Hood River, Josephine, Lake, Lane, Lincoln, Linn, Moro, Polk, Sherman, Tillamook, Wallowa, Wheeler and Yamhill.

Falls Man Is Critical In Hospital

Paul Stippich, 20, injured recently in an automobile collision, is reported to be in critical condition in a Portland hospital following heart surgery Wednesday.

According to word reaching here from the youth's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Stippich, at the bedside of their son, he was sitting up preparatory to returning home to Klamath Falls when doctors discovered a heart irregularity.

He was immediately rushed by ambulance to Portland and eight-hour emergency surgery followed. He survived surgery but his chances for survival will not be known for two or three days. Paul received other serious injuries including broken bones and injury to a lung in the wreck that seriously injured two other Klamath Falls boys.

They were en route to Portland to ski at Mt. Hood.

Virgil Stippich is planning mill superintendent at Weyerhaeuser Company Mill here.

FUNERAL SERVICES were held in the First Presbyterian Church Saturday morning for Leroy F. Carter, well known Klamath Falls businessman who died Dec. 29. Mr. Carter was co-owner with a son, Ronald, of Carter's Fine Foods Market. Final rites and vault interment were in Klamath Memorial Park.

Flemming Discusses UO Position

PORTLAND (AP) — Arthur S. Flemming, who is about to lose his job as secretary of Health, Education and Welfare in the cabinet of President Eisenhower, will confer with the state Board of Higher Education here on the possibility of his becoming president of the University of Oregon.

On Friday Flemming met with the Board of Deans at the university at Eugene.

After conferring with the board, Flemming held a news conference, but reporters were told he would not answer questions about the university job.

Flemming said that he does not favor the so-called disclaimer affidavit part of the loyalty oath, necessary for using benefits of the National Defense Education Act. He said he had recommended appeal of the affidavit. The National Defense Education Act provides grants for strengthening science and language studies and loans to qualified students.

Flemming said also that the present administration believes that federal aid to education should be limited to classroom construction. He said that if federal money was used for teachers' salaries or school operation expenses, there is a danger of government interference in local school affairs.

RTA Asks Response On Home

Members of the Klamath County Retired Teachers Association are seeking information from anyone interested in establishment of a home for senior citizens and the aged to be located in Klamath County.

Members are also keeping informed on the coming Eisenhower Conference on the Aged to be held in Washington, D.C., in early January.

Mrs. Marshall Cornett, appointed by Gov. Mark O. Hatfield, will attend.

During the last year, members have had as a group project the distribution of good American magazines overseas. Lorena Ward indicated in a report to the members during the December meeting that many magazines had been contributed and mailed. The group also made cookies for veterans at Camp White and collected toys for the Christmas Bureau.

"BOOTSY," described by his masters, Mr. and Mrs. Dean Loucks, 5131 Cottage Avenue, as "just cat," wears what might be interpreted as a relieved look in this pose with Boyd Lee Loucks, 4. Bootsy was chased 35 feet up the power pole in back and was afraid to come down last week. The Suburban Fire Department, California Oregon Power Company and the local Humane Society were consulted and finally Don Capper, a volunteer fireman, climbed a tall ladder and brought Bootsy to warmth and safety.
