Blimp Heading West; Trip To Take Five Days

LAKEHURST, N.J. (UPI) — A football field sized Navy blimp nosed westward today on a five-day flight that modern jet aircraft can rip off in less than five hours. The ZPG2W will be the largest dirigible ever to cross the Rocky Mountains as it heads for Santa Ana, Calif. The 343-foot silver bag, carrying a crew of about 20, left this southern New Jersey air station at 3:36 p.m. EST Tuesday on a five-day, two-stop flight. The blimp is scheduled to refuel at Glynnco, Ga., and Del Rio, Tex., before crossing the southern Rockies at Van Horn Pass, near El Paso and the Mexican border. A spokesman said the craft was not out to set any endurance or speed records. The Navy blimp will be the first seen on the West Coast in three years. Blimp usage was reduced after the World War II and was eliminated on the West Coast. The ZPG2W was sent west for "oceanographic and research and development work in California," the Navy said.

Highway Officials Discuss Local Road Projects

Two representatives of the State Highway Commission met with Klamath County Court Wednesday to discuss joint road and street projects proposed for 1951. Dean Swift, division engineer, and Victor Wolfe, administrative assistant, and the county court visited the sites of two of the projects. One project is the link to be built connecting South Sixth Street and Shasta Way. The street would run from the corner of Shasta Way and Alameda to the corner of South Sixth and Summers Lane. Swift and Wolfe presented a plan to build it. County Judge R. R. (Bob) Walker said money has been appropriated for the project and by District Attorney Dale T. Crabtree. Under the agreement, the highway commission would maintain the street if the county would. The other project discussed was how to alleviate the bottleneck on State Highway 39 at the Tulelake-Malin junction just outside of Merrill. Both groups agreed that "something needs to be done" but no concrete plans were laid.
