ROBERT DANIELSON

Attorneys Form New Law Firm

Robert Danielson, a young attorney who grew up in Klamath Falls, has returned to this city to enter law partnership with Glenn D. Ramirez. The new law firm will be known as Ramirez and Danielson and will have offices at 432 Main Street. Ramirez' previous partner, Hal F. Coe, was appointed district judge last week by Gov. Mark O. Hatfield. Danielson went to grade school in Klamath Falls, but finished high school in Bend. He graduated from the University of Oregon Law School in 1954. The new attorney spent a brief period in Klamath Falls in 1958 and 1959, when he was a deputy district attorney for Richard C. Beesley for six weeks and was associated with Ramirez for a short period. For the past year, he has been assistant attorney general to Robert Y. Thornton in Salem. "I'm happy to be back in Klamath Falls," Danielson said. "I'm sure I'll be here longer this time."

Republicans Point Guns Toward Big City Demos

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republicans pointed their guns toward the big city Democratic machine Saturday as they repaired gaps in the GOP organization defeated in the presidential election. National Chairman Thurston B. Morton called on Ohio State Chairman Ray Bliss to head a task force charged with probing "the practicalities of big city politics" and telling Republicans how to win in these areas. Bliss, whose organization carried Ohio for Vice President Richard M. Nixon in November, is a potential successor to Morton. Morton accepted a unanimous invitation of the committee Friday to remain as chairman. But he said he will resign later in the year to begin campaigning for reelection to the Senate from Kentucky. Morton named Bernard M. Shanley, former White House staff member, to devise a "precinct security program" aimed at making it certain only authorized voters are cast and that they are counted correctly. As an echo of Republican charges of irregularities in some states such as Illinois which Nixon lost by narrow margins, Morton asked for a model election law of "full equity" to recommend to state legislatures. He picked Harley B. Markham of Idaho to head a drafting group. These actions, combined with a drive to register voters now, added up to an early start on the 1962 campaign for control of Congress. President Eisenhower told committee members Friday they can win the House if they work hard enough. The whole theme of the committee's two-day meeting, winding up with a closed session Saturday, was directed at the congressional elections nearly two years away.
