

Bank Robber Given Another Chance

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Naasam Zeghabe's wife and two of his three young daughters waited tensely in court while the black-robed judge determined the confessed bank robber's future.

U.S. District Court Judge Thurmond Clark Monday called Zeghabe before him. The sentence, he said, was 10 years in federal prison—suspended.

Zeghabe, 35, would be able to go home to his family, the active part of his sentence being five years on probation.

"Thank you for giving our daddy back—we need him!" cried Zeghabe's daughter, Nadya, 11. She threw her arms around the judge and loudly kissed him on the cheek.

"I will never give you cause to regret, your honor," said a smiling Zeghabe.

"While the court does not condone your actions," said Clark, "It must look to the future. This seems to be a case in which to make an exception."

Clark's faith in Zeghabe grew during the Christmas holidays when the defendant was allowed to go home to his family in suburban Anaheim for Christmas and voluntarily returned to jail two days later.

Clark had approved the Christmas furlough without bail after

Nadya had written a plaintive letter saying "we have never been separated on Christmas."

Zeghabe had never before been in trouble with the law when he robbed a Los Angeles bank of $400 last fall. He was quickly apprehended and admitted the crime. He said he was broke and unemployed. Many persons have written offering to give him jobs.
