

'John Q' May End Strikes

FONTANA, Calif. (AP) — The Kaiser Steel Corp. and the United Steelworkers of America are asking the public to sit in permanently on future relations between company and union.

The goal: to eliminate strikes. Both Edgar F. Kaiser, board chairman of Kaiser Steel, and David J. McDonald, union president, have high hopes for the plan. So does the chief representative of the public on the company-union Long Range Committee, Dr. George W. Taylor, University of Pennsylvania professor. He is chairman of the committee and headed President Eisenhower's Taft-Hartley board of inquiry during the 1959 steel strike.

"We're all hopeful this will minimize if not eliminate strikes over renewal of agreements," Taylor told a news conference at the Kaiser Steel plant here Friday.

The Long Range Committee, set up after the 1959 strike, has equal representation from company, union and public. Its overall purpose continues unchanged — to recommend ways of sharing the company's future economic progress equitably among stockholders, employees and the public. Spokesmen stressed that in asking the public's representatives to take part, when necessary, in future collective bargaining, neither company nor union is binding itself to follow the public members' advice.

Specific grievances will not be handled by the committee. Kaiser said: "We have found that sitting down together three or four times a year has given each of us a better and more detailed understanding of what subjects help keep the peace."

Both sides indicated public sentiment is an important factor in settlement of labor disputes.

The committee includes as other public members Dr. John T. Dunlop, Harvard University professor, and David L. Cole, former director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service.

Both Kaiser and McDonald said they hope and believe a new contract can be negotiated, without a strike, before the present one expires July 1.

In another development, McDonald announced the appointment of his assistant, Marvin J. Miller, to replace Arthur J. Goldberg on the committee. Goldberg resigned after President-elect John F. Kennedy designated him as secretary of labor.

The third union member of the committee is Charles J. Smith, a West Coast district director. Company members are Kaiser and Vice Presidents C.F. Borden and E.E. Trefethan Jr.

Mint Fields Infested With Wilt

CORVALLIS (AP) — Nearly every peppermint field in the Willamette Valley is infested with mint wilt, an agricultural scientist told the Oregon Essential Oil Growers League Friday night.

As a result of that infestation, said C. E. Horner, some 5,000 to 6,000 acres of peppermint production in the valley will be shifted to wilt-free areas in the next few years.

The problem is increasingly serious, said Horner, a plant pathologist at Oregon State College, and can be solved only by development of wilt resistant varieties of mint. Research along that line is promising, he said.

Other speakers told the 130 delegates at the final session of the association's annual meeting that higher prices for the mint crop are in the offing for the next two years.

New officers were elected, and they included: Ed Ammon, Jefferson, president; Arthur B. Yungen, Madras, vice president; Ian C. MacSwan, Corvallis, secretary; James Gassler, Springfield, treasurer; and Morris Funke, Eugene, and Richard Nelson, Nyssa, directors.

Mt. Etna Erupts

CATANIA, Sicily (AP) — Mt. Etna broke into a new eruption today. Lava poured out of a crater on the northeast side of the volcano several hundred yards below the main cone.

Scientists said the new outbreak did not seem to be of major violence. The volcano has erupted intermittently since last fall.

TAX EXEMPTION

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Finance Committee Friday approved a bill to exempt from federal taxes tickets sold by the 1961 inaugural committee and future similar groups. Also exempt would be official medallions sold for 1961 and future inaugurations. House and Senate approval are expected.
