

Here's Recipe For Mad Crush

By ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: A group of us 16 and 17-year-olds had a slumber party and we spent most of the night talking about our favorite subject. You guessed it—boys. The biggest unsolved problem of girls in our age group can be expressed in a single sentence: How does a gal get over a mad crush?

Do you have a recipe, Ann? If you don't have one handy will you whip one up? Thanks in advance. We knew you wouldn't fail us.—CACKLERS AT A HEN PARTY

Dear Cacklers: Here are the Landers Rules for Getting Over a Mad Crush—whipped up especially for you. I hope you will put them into practice when the need arises and let me know if they work:

1. Accept the fact emotionally (as well as intellectually) that the romance is over. Don't hang on to bits and pieces of something that's ancient history.
2. Return his picture his ring, his sweater, his I.D. bracelet or anything else of value that he has given you. In brief, broom out all the old reminders.
3. Don't let yourself spend a single minute day-dreaming about how things used to be. When off on such flights of fantasy the mind has a magic way of screening out all the unpleasant details. It can deceive you into believing things were better than they actually were.
4. Start dating other fellows as soon as possible. The only way to fill a vacuum is to put something else in its place.

Dear Ann Landers: My wife and I have been arguing about your column. She says our 11-year-old daughter should read it every day. I claim an 11-year-old can wait a few years to find out about unwed mothers, drunken husbands, wife-beaters, cheaters and all the low types running loose these days. Both my wife and I have learned some valuable things from your column but still I feel it is not good for young people. Why should they be exposed to the sordid side of life so soon? Childhood should be carefree, clean and happy with no hint of worry or suffering. Am I wrong?—INQUIRER

Dear Inquirer: No—you're not wrong—you just have a poor memory. Was your childhood carefree, clean, happy with no hint of worry or suffering? Well, no one else had such a childhood either.

If your 11-year-old doesn't know about unwed mothers it's time she learned. Information never hurt anyone. Ignorance, can be dangerous.

No one who reads this column can possibly get the idea that promiscuity, drinking, cheating and gambling are admirable. So long as this column discloses life in a constructive way I am confident it is fit reading (and a good education) for anyone who is old enough to understand the words.

Dear Ann Landers: Is it proper for a man who is a bartender to have his wife sitting at the bar four and five hours every evening? I can't figure out who is watching who but in my opinion the boss should put a stop to it. Do you agree?—SIG

P.S. She drinks on the house. Dear Sig: No wife should spend hours keeping her husband company on the job. If neither one knows better they should be told.

Are your parents too strict? You can benefit from the experiences of thousands of teenagers if you write for Ann Landers' booklet, "How To Live With Your Parents," enclosing with your request 20 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope. Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Gov. Hatfield Invited To Testify On Proposed State Reorganization

SALEM (AP)—Gov. Mark O. Hatfield of Oregon will get a chance to testify Jan. 24 on his proposed reorganization of state government.

The invitation was extended Monday by the Senate and House State and Federal Affairs committees, which handle reorganization bills.

The governor's reorganization bill was introduced by Sens. Anthony Yturri, Republican leader from Ontario, and Walter Pearson, D-Portland. Pearson is chairman of the Senate State and Federal Affairs Committee.

Pearson said Monday that the bill will be the first of the reorganization bills on which hearings will be held but the last on which action will be taken.

The bill sets up departments of commerce, labor, natural resources, public safety, social services, transportation and utilities.

Pearson said there is nothing in the bill that sets up any mechanics. He said these will be set forth in 17 to 21 bills dealing with specifics of reorganization within departments.

He said the department bills will be acted on first and the master bill last, so it can be amended to match the other bills if the need arises.

The Senate Highway Committee at a meeting Monday agreed to introduce a bill at the request of the Motor Vehicles Department that would provide for a permanent license plate for Oregon passenger cars.

The bill provides for a $30 one-time license and a $20 title transfer fee to make up for the loss of the annual $10 license fee and $2 transfer fee.

Vern Hill, director of Motor Vehicles, told the committee the shift to permanent license plates would reduce administrative activity in the registration division about 50 per cent and save $1 million a year. He said $12,000 transactions would be eliminated.

The proposal was one of four presented by the department. Its introduction did not indicate committee support.

The other alternatives to make up lost revenue would: Put a half-cent gasoline tax increase to bring the state tax to 6 1/2 cents a gallon, $20 license fees, and $15 transfer fee.

Provide a one-cent gasoline tax increase, $10 license fee, and $5 transfer fee.

Raise both license and transfer fees to $25.

The Oregon Museum of Science and Industry, Oregon Historical Society and the Department of Geology and Mineral Industries asked a Joint Ways and Means subcommittee for more money.

OSMI asked for $60,000, which is well above the $36,750 approved in Hatfield's proposed budget. The Oregon Historical Society asked $192,000, the amount in the governor's budget and more than the $99,500 received in this biennium. These two groups are only partly supported by the state.

The Department of Geology and Mineral Industries sought $404,178 compared to $369,921 in this biennium. The governor's budget calls for $367,649 in the next biennium. Sprague, publisher of the Oregon Statesman, appeared on behalf of the Historical Society Board. He said that under its old budget it lacked the funds to pay its staff.

Stevenson Filly Wins In Contests

BONANZA—Mr. and Mrs. Jim Stevenson and their horse "Miss Flex" returned in triumph Sunday to their Langell Valley Ranch from cutting horse contests and the annual convention of the Oregon Cutting Horse Association at the Tripp Angus Ranch, Springfield.

Stevenson was elected president of the association. He maneuvered his horse to wins in both the first and second rounds of association finals there and "Miss Flex" was named show champion.

The trophy donated each year by the national association to high-point horse in each state went to "Big Chief Wimpy," owned and ridden by Jim Wilson, Grants Pass. Mrs. Stevenson presented the award.

Second place trophy went to "Lucky Boy A," owned and ridden by Nels Smith, Portland. Mrs. Gene Allenmack, Eugene, made the presentation.

Elections took place Saturday afternoon. Officers, besides Stevenson, are Lucky Warren, vice president, Springfield, and his wife, Sarah, secretary-treasurer.

A meeting will be called soon for judging instruction, said Stevenson.

Hospitals Will Keep Tax Status

SALEM (AP)—Non-profit hospitals which agree to treat charitable patients will continue to be exempt from property taxes, the State Tax Commission told the Senate Taxation Committee Monday.

The net effect of this new directive will be to continue exemptions granted to hospitals.

Several days ago, the commission had indicated that some hospitals might be placed on the tax rolls, thus losing their exemptions.

Sen. Walter J. Pearson, D-Portland, member of the Senate committee, objected strongly to that order. Then Carlisle Roberts, Tax Commission research director, told the committee of the new order.

Children Lack Immunizing Shots, Local Survey Shows

In a survey of children entering school in first grades last September and authorized by the Klamath County health officer, Dr. Seth Kerron, it was found that in the county schools a high percentage have not been immunized for diphtheria, whooping cough, tetanus and small pox, and tetanus and diphtheria.

City schools showed a better record. In releasing the figures, Dr. Kerron stated that in the county schools, 146 or 23 per cent have had no protection against diphtheria, whooping cough, tetanus, and 189 or 29 per cent have received no immunization for small pox. A still higher percentage of children, 45 per cent in the county schools, have not had polio immunization.

City school first graders are better protected with 88 per cent being immunized against diphtheria, whooping cough, tetanus, 82 per cent against small pox and polio. It is the province and duty of parents, Dr. Kerron said, to assure that their children are immunized against these diseases. Booster shots where recommended should be given.

The state board of health, he further commented, is concerned about the number of unprotected children. The figures indicate that infants and young children are in the danger bracket. The county health officer urges all parents of young children to visit offices of the family doctor or go to the Klamath County Health Department for immediate immunization.

If children have already been immunized, Dr. Kerron cautions, booster immunization should be given every three years for diphtheria, whooping cough, tetanus until the age of 7 years, then for diphtheria-tetanus every three years after that until the child is through high school.

The health department expects to make a survey among Klamath Union High School students in the near future to determine the immunity level of students against diphtheria, tetanus and polio.

Records show that there were some 850 cases of diphtheria reported in the United States during 1960 that could have been prevented with proper immunization. Tetanus is highly fatal. In a recent report of eight cases in Virginia, four died, two children and two adults.

Still Trying To Find Jury

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Attorneys for the state and defense begin their third week today trying to find 12 jurors to hear the third murder trial of Dr. It. Bernard Finch and Carol Tregoff. Attorneys were hopeful the jury would be selected sometime early this week.

With two previous trials of the illicit lovers, attorneys have had a difficult time in finding 12 persons from Los Angeles County who have not already formed an opinion on the case.

Finch, 44, and his red-haired former receptionist, Carol, 24, are accused of plotting and carrying out the July 18, 1959, gunshot slaying of the surgeon's socialite wife, Barbara, 33.

ASTORIA, Ore. (AP)—Findings of a Coast Guard inquiry into the four-boat disaster that took seven lives last week will not be known for some time.

Charge Double Jeopardy In Garrett Murder Case

PORTLAND (AP)—Attorneys for Mrs. Joseph L. Garrett, 33, argued today for her release from a second charge of murder.

Attorney Earl F. Bernard said the state was placing her in double jeopardy by filing a charge against her after she had been acquitted of one first degree murder charge.

State Circuit Judge Alan F. Davis directed a verdict of acquittal on the first charge Monday, saying the state had not established a motive for the crime.

Mrs. Garrett, member of a prominent Dallas, Texas, family, had been accused of setting a fire that killed three of her four children and their governess in the Garrett home here Oct. 6.

She was accused specifically of causing the death of her daughter, Gaye, 5 months.

The second charge accused her of responsibility for the death of another child, Angela, 3.

Another Garrett, upset by a quarrel with her husband, spread inflammable liquid in the living room and started the fire.

The defense, which also entered a plea of insanity, argued the fire started accidentally from a candle left by Mrs. Garrett as a memento to her husband.
