ville. They sold the Prineville ranch in 1955. The elder Jacob died. Jacob returned to the Merrill area and his brother to Bonanza, where he has a ranch.

Jacob's business was built without benefit of any such assistance as an inheritance. He has had to learn the purebred breeding business by intuition and home study, for he received no college education.

Jacob is proud of his corrals, designed for the easiest possible stock handling. But mechanized refinements cannot be used as often in a cattle operation as in plant crop farming, so the operation means a lot of hard, hand work.

He breaks all his purebred stock to halter. Jacob encourages youngsters to enter the cattle business. Each year he sponsors a field day at his ranch, during which 4-H Club youngsters from the county are invited to participate in several judging class contests and to sit in on demonstrations of grooming, feeding and judging.

Nearly 150 youngsters came last year, representing all 4-H clubs in the county specializing in livestock. Some came from the Tulalake area in California, too.

He obtains awards for the contest winners from various merchants in the area. Jacob is president of the Oregon Hereford Association and has been vice president and director. He is vice president of the Klamath County Junior Farmers organization, vice president of the Klamath County Cattlemen's Association and is a member of Oregon Cattlemen's Association.

He is chaplain of Malin Masonic Lodge and is a member of the Scottish Rite, Masonic Order, in Klamath Falls. He and his wife, Lois, have three sons, James, 6; Scott, 4; and David, 2.

Price Drop May Prompt Memorial

SALEM (AP)—State Sen. E. D. Potts, D-Grants Pass, said today that, if the price of plywood drops any lower, he will urge a joint memorial asking immediate federal housing legislation.

Potts, a sawmill operator, said that, if the price dropped below the present $60, it could result in a wholesale shutdown of plywood mills in Oregon.

The former Grants Pass mayor said unemployment in Josephine County already is the highest in the state.

"If our mills in our county find they can't operate under this price," Potts said, "we are going to find a crisis in our No. 1 industry."

The price dropped Monday to $60 for one thousand square feet of sanded-on-ends AD plywood, the lowest since World War II.

"The 1961 legislature," Potts said, "should certainly use every available means at its disposal to help create a more favorable plywood and lumber market for the producers of the state."

"It is my belief that the sawmills and plywood mills cannot operate at this market price. This is the rock bottom."

Major producers had blamed smaller producers for failing to hold the price line.

Potts said that the smaller producer has to sell what he produces because he does not have the money to hold on to it like the big producer.

"If the market doesn't improve," Potts said, "there should be a joint memorial urging Congress to pass a federal housing bill that would make money available for construction immediately."

Council Launches City Clean-up Of Building Hazards, Lists Sites

A clean-up of unsafe and hazardous buildings was launched by the city council at its regular Monday night session in city hall.

A list of building sites that should be condemned was cited by the council for condemnation proceedings.

The areas listed were: a portion of the Weaver cabins listed as 1694 Portland, 911 Alameda and 913 Alameda; lot 5, block 93, Klamath Addition; lot 5, block 1, Railroad Addition; lots 3 and 4, block 65, Buena Vista Addition; east half of lot 7, block 12, Buena Vista Addition; lot 42, block 2, Industrial Addition; lot 6, block 12, Buena Vista Addition and building on lots 1 and 2, block 4, Industrial Addition.

The council instructed the city attorney to prepare resolutions setting a date for hearing on condemnation proceedings against these structures.

An earlier condemnation proceeding was held up by the council at the request of Attorney William Ganong Sr., who informed the group that the property was in an estate currently being probated. He asked a nine-month extension, stating that he was afraid that if the buildings were removed now, some of the trustees of the estate might hold that the building had a higher value than it really did. The council approved the delay.

A commendation for George Price and the Park and Recreation Department was accorded by the council. It read, "For George Price and his department's work in organizing an effective recreational program at Klamath Auditorium."

The First National Bank of Portland was successful bidder on $18,130.96 worth of improvement bonds to pave Alandale Street. The firm bid an interest figure of $6,746.50 over the next 20 years. This amount was $4 less interest than the figure of $6,750.60 submitted by U.S. National Bank. Effective rate of interest on the bonds was 3.75 per cent.

Final reading was given to an ordinance controlling the height of shrubbery and other vegetation grown at intersections, particularly on parking strips. Purpose of the ordinance is to provide safety for auto traffic at intersections.

An ordinance vacating a portion of Huron Street was also given final reading and adopted. Approval was granted to the Exchange Club to conduct a block of dimes drive on Main Street between Eighth and Ninth streets on Saturday, Jan. 28, and the Camp Fire Girls were given permission to sell candy mints from Feb. 25 to March 11.

City Manager G. S. Vergeer was instructed by the council to prepare a rough draft of a proposed ordinance which would amend the fire zone so as to include an area in the vicinity of Rickfall's housing on South Sixth Street and Shasta Way.

Astoria Plans Memorial To Dead Guardsmen

ASTORIA, Ore. (AP) — Beach parties continued to search for bodies today as townspeople began planning a memorial for five Coast Guardsmen who drowned while trying to rescue two fishermen last week.

Only one body has been washed ashore, that of John L. Culp, 31, Hammond, Ore., a boatswain's mate I.C., who commanded the largest Coast Guard vessel, a 52-footer, that went down while trying to take a disabled fishing boat in tow.

Two smaller Coast Guard motor lifeboats also sank in the howling storm at the mouth of the Columbia River. One went down after limping seven miles to the safety of a lightsip with three men it had pulled from the water.

A Coast Guard spokesman said today that the four missing men are presumed dead. Beach patrols will continue, he said, for it usually takes from nine to 11 days for bodies to be washed ashore.

Also missing and presumed dead are the two crewmen who were aboard the fishing boat, the Mermaid, that broke up and sank.

They are Bert and Stanley Bergman, Ilwaco, Wash. Residents of this area, where fishing is a big business, have started making plans for a memorial fund that would be used to erect a monument to the dead Coast Guardsmen. A meeting will be held here tonight to discuss it. The Coast Guard has rescued hundreds of fishermen over the years around the mouth of the Columbia. Last Thursday's disaster was the first time a Coast Guardman had been killed in such a rescue attempt.

Skies were clear and the sun was shining brightly today as beach patrols searched for bodies. The weather was far different on the day of the sinking. Breakers then ran 30 feet high and there were winds with gusts up to 60 miles an hour.

President Says Goodbye With Prayer For Peace

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Eisenhower, ending his administration as he began it with a prayer for peace, urged his successor Tuesday night never to abandon the conference table for the "certain agony of the battlefield."

In a solemn and un sentimental farewell radio-TV speech from the White House, the old soldier told the American people to gird themselves for a long struggle against the "hostile ideology" of Communism. He cautioned the nation not to be tempted by what appears to be some "miraculous solution."

The 70-year-old retiring President, who leaves the White House at noon Friday after serving his country for nearly 50 years, promised to do "what little I can" as a private citizen to find world peace.

President-elect John F. Kennedy, who left his Georgetown home for two glittering parties shortly after the speech, said he did not watch Eisenhower's address.

Stripped of most belongings, Eisenhower warned the nation to be ever vigilant against allowing a military - scientific - industrial elite to exert "unwarranted influence" over the government during the struggle with Communism.

He noted that an "immense" military establishment and arms industry have grown up in this country since World War II. While these are imperative to the nation's defense, he said, the country must be alert to their "grave implications" so that liberty is not destroyed in the name of security.

Eisenhower conceded he was leaving the burdens of his office after eight years with a "definite sense of disappointment" that he had not been able to reach a disarmament agreement with Russia.

"I wish I could say tonight that a lasting peace is in sight," he said. "Happily, I can say that war has been avoided."

Without mentioning Kennedy by name, Eisenhower opened his speech by wishing the new President and his aides "Godspeed." He said, "like every other citizen, I wish that the coming years will be blessed with peace and prosperity for all." Eisenhower, who offered a prayer in his inaugural speech eight years ago, ended his 20-minute goodbye address with a prayer that the time would come when all peoples would "live together in a peace guaranteed by the binding force of mutual respect and love."
