Want Close Supervision Of Welfare; Governor Tells State Legislature

By PAUL W. HARVEY JR.
SALEM (AP) — Gov. Mark O. Hatfield told Republican legislators today he wants to move the Public Welfare Commission headquarters from Portland to Salem to enable him to keep a closer watch over it.
The move, the Republican governor told the GOP legislative minority, would give him a chance to try to make the commission conform with his policies.
Party leaders said that was the only subject discussed at the meeting, and that the legislators themselves did not discuss it.
"By guess," said Sen. Anthony Yturri, R-Ontario, minority leader in the Senate, "is that the Republicans will go along with the governor. But there has been no test of sentiment within the party."
Yturri said the governor did not try to bind his party on the question.
The only vote against the measure was cast by Rep. Edward N. Fodeley, D-Eugene, who claimed the measure also would eliminate the right of refusal to bear arms for religious reasons.
After a long debate, the Senate sent to the House a bill to increase the size of 11-member Legislative Fiscal Committee to 13.
This committee was first created in 1959 to be a watchdog over the state finances.
The bill was passed 23-6, despite arguments over whether the chairmen of the Taxation and Ways and Means committees should continue to be designated as members of the committee, as now is the case.
Sen. Walter J. Pearson, D-Portland, wanted the designations removed. He said that when one of these chairmen resigns from the committee, there is no provision for naming a successor.
The Senate Local Government Committee killed a bill that would have allowed cities to issue sewage bonds without vote of the people.
The Senate completed legislative action on a resolution expressing regret at the recent loss of seven lives in a ship rescue at the mouth of the Columbia River.
Sen. Alf Corbett, D-Portland, introduced a resolution thanking President Eisenhower for his "devoted service," courage and efforts to maintain peace.
Sen. Andrew J. Naterlin, D-Newport, sponsored a bill to permit competing electricity distributors to allocate territories between them.

The BPA post pays $17,500 a year.
The present administrator is Dr. William A. Pearl.

Several Are Charged In Insurance Swindle

PORTLAND (AP) — Planned automobile collisions and subsequent damage claims are charged in a number of indictments returned here by a federal grand jury, Asst. U. S. Atty. C. E. Luckey said today.
Luckey said the indictments charge that several persons would agree in advance to stage a collision. One car would be covered by insurance, he said, and then the occupants of the other car would put in a claim.
The first such case in the investigation that led to the indictments occurred in 1958. Luckey said. He declined to estimate the total amount of the damage claims, saying only that it was substantial.

2 Lawyers Take Stand

Klamath Falls attorneys Freeman C. Murray and Richard Beesley testified Tuesday morning in the post conviction hearing of William Thomaston, California cement contractor serving a life sentence for the shotgun murder of a friend's wife in July, 1958.
Murray was Thomaston's court appointed attorney and Beesley collaborated on the defense of the case. Both lawyers refused charges by Thomaston that he had not had adequate defense and that he was "coerced" to plead guilty to second degree murder.
Thomaston is seeking release from the penitentiary on the grounds that his constitutional rights were violated. The hearing, being conducted by Judge Herbert M. Schwab of Portland, is expected to be concluded Tuesday afternoon.
