Need $190,000 To Pay Final Olympic Bills

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — John E. Carr, state director of finance, said today he probably will ask the legislature for about $190,000 to pay off final bills of the 1960 Winter Olympics.

"I don't see much else to do," he said, referring to a final audit of Olympic bookkeeping released today by his department and the state auditor general.

The financial report said that despite the fact that California poured $12 million into the Olympic Games and the federal government added $3 million more, $188,128 still was needed to pay off final bills.

The audit report also said: —That the Olympics Organizing Committee and the Olympics Commission overspent by $786,787 the budgets set for them by the 1960 legislature.

—That the Department of Finance released $291,903 more state money to the Olympics than the legislature authorized them to give. Earlier this figure was estimated at $400,000.

—And that $35,000 in furniture and equipment was missing from Squaw Valley, either through theft or improper inventory procedures.

Senate Ag Committee Studies Expanded Milk Control Plans

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The Senate Agriculture Committee Thursday was studying a proposal under which the California Department of Agriculture would supervise milk inspection with an expanded program that would cost over $1 million.

Sen. Paul Byrne, R-Chico, told the legislature Wednesday the committee heads had not reached agreement on a specific recommendation after interim study of the problem of overlapping milk inspection jurisdiction.

Byrne said he had asked a dairy industry committee which has been working with the Senate group to continue its study of the problem with the hope of submitting a bill before the end of the current session.

Byrne said the committee was considering the principles that milk inspection is primarily in the interest of public health, and secondarily a service to the industry;

Under the proposal, the department would set milk inspection standards, supervise inspection and personnel training, designate and approve local inspection agencies, provide financing, and provide inspection in areas where it would be uneconomical to have local inspection systems.

The committee also took the following actions on these agricultural problems.

Pear decline: The committee has already introduced a Senate joint resolution asking the federal government for more funds to study the disease.

Predator control: Recommended that Congress be asked to make additional funds available to the Bureau of Sports, Fisheries and Wildlife for predator control; said the problem would receive continued study from an industry advisory committee created by Byrne.

Livestock sales: Recommended that the problem of direct sales of slaughter livestock in which sellers are unprotected be reassigned to the committee for further study.

Agricultural minerals: Asked

(therefore, the cost of milk inspection should come from the state's general fund.)

He said the industry committee was working on a proposal recommended by Russell Richards, California Farm Bureau Federation legislative representative, to expand the Department of Agriculture's place in inspection programs.

Under the proposal, the department would set milk inspection standards, supervise inspection and personnel training, designate and approve local inspection agencies, provide financing, and provide inspection in areas where it would be uneconomical to have local inspection systems.

Agricultural minerals: Asked that industry and state representatives meet on the problem of unequal taxes for commercial fertilizers and agricultural minerals in an effort to recommend legislation.

Produce containers: Said an industry committee study of proposals to authorize the Department of Agriculture to set standards for fruit and vegetable containers could not be completed in time for the 1961 session.

Bill To Extend Powers Of Commission Offered

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A bill to extend the general regulatory powers of the Fish and Game Commission for another two years was introduced Wednesday in the legislature.

Sen. Charles Brown, D-Shoshone, submitted a bill to assure that the commission does not go out of business with the end of the 1961 legislature.

Under current law, the powers of the commission to regulate management of fish and game would expire this year. There was no question about approval of the bill by the lawmakers.

Meanwhile, Sen. J. Howard Williams, R-Porterville, introduced legislation to give the Department of Fish and Game power to manage, control and protect salmon spawning areas of the state's streams.

The measure would give the department prevailing power over other agencies with the single exception of state or regional water pollution control boards.

It also would require government agencies, public utilities and private persons operating on streams to consider recommendations of the department for protection of fish and wildlife.
