

This Gal's View Is Unobstructed

By ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a gal who is 5 feet 8 inches tall in stocking feet. Of course a girl can't go anywhere in stockings and shoes. I'm 5 feet 10 inches tall in shoes.

When I go to a party where there is dance music a certain little runt always manages to seek me out. He's an excellent dancer but he's about two heads shorter than I am and he nestles his head on my bosom when we dance.

The other night we won the first prize and I didn't even realize we were in a contest. I suspect we won not because we were such good dancers but because we were so funny-looking.

Please tell me what to do the next time this shrimp asks me to dance. Now that we're "a prize-winning team" I may be stuck forever.—LONG SAL

Dear Sal: Where's your sense of humor, gal? No one ever laughs at people who are smart enough to laugh at themselves. While you're dancing with the runt keep an eye peeled for a basketball player.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a girl 17 who is very mixed up about my feelings toward my mother. I'm very fond of a fellow who goes to college in the east. We've gone together two years—the last year steady. His letters are beautiful. Sometimes he writes me poetry. Of course it's all very romantic and personal—intended for my eyes only.

I learned today that my mother read my letters and the poetry to her bridge club when they met at our house last week. I was heartick.

When I asked for an explanation Mother said she thought the letters were so wonderful she wanted to share them with others. I never knew until now that she read my mail. What shall I say to her? I haven't been able to think straight enough to say anything yet.—DISAPPOINTED

Dear Disappointed: The poetry was not intended for your mother and she had no right to see it, much less share it with others. She was of course showing you off to her lady friends so please try to temper your judgment with a little mercy. Tell her you are deeply disappointed that she would help herself to your mail and you hope that it won't happen again.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm having trouble with my husband's ex-wife. She insists on using the name Mrs. Ambrose Kloppenkaup. I just made up that name so you can print it if you want to. They were divorced seven years ago and the name now belongs to me, not to her.

My husband and his father are prominent in this community and since he is a Jr. it is also embarrassing my mother-in-law some embarrassment.

Does an ex-wife have the legal right to do this? What can I do?—BOTHERED

Dear Bothered: Sorry—according to law she has the right to use the name. She is still Mrs. Ambrose Kloppenkaup. Most divorced women are delighted to unload the name when they unload the guy but apparently it isn't so in this case.

If alcohol is robbing you or someone you love of health and dignity, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Help For The Alcoholic," enclosing with your request 20 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Testifies Against Tax Lift

SALEM (AP) — A spokesman for Oregon counties Thursday testified against a Senate bill that would ease the weight-mileage tax on trucks weighing more than 44,000 pounds.

Ken Tallenaar, executive secretary of the Association of Oregon Counties, told the Senate Highway Committee that the counties could ill afford to lose some $190,000 in road fund revenues.

He said his association believed that heavy truck traffic increases the cost of maintaining county roads.

Joe Jaross, Washington County commission judge, also appeared in opposition to the bill.

Jaross blamed heavy commercial truck traffic for repair problems on certain county roads.

John Anderson, Marion County road engineer and past president of the Association of County Engineers, said counties are in dire need of more road funds and this measure would cost them much road money.

The committee scheduled another hearing on the bill Monday.

Six Hurt When Bridge Trusses Hit Building

PORTLAND (AP) — One minute it was a peaceful office building. The next, 100 tons of falling steel laid open seven offices with a deafening roar.

Two men, who had been on the second floor, found themselves dazed on the first floor. Four other persons were partly buried under desks, filing cabinets and plaster.

Gusty winds had blown over two huge prefabricated steel bridge trusses, which had been resting beside the Port of Portland office building.

Somehow only one person was injured seriously when the trusses smashed into the two-story building just after lunch Thursday. She was Nancy Healy, a secretary who suffered broken ribs, cuts and bruises as she was pinned under a desk.

Five other office workers suffered lesser injuries.

Rod Eckerson had perhaps the closest call. Through a window he saw the trusses falling and had just time to push away from his desk on the first floor.

"Eckerson's hands were sticking out from under the debris where his desk had been," said another office worker, Robert Finley. "He must have pushed back or he would have been crushed to splinters along with his desk, which wound up in the basement."

The two who found themselves on the wrong floor were Allen Johnson and Earle Didzun.

"I don't know what happened. Allen and I suddenly found ourselves on the floor below, half-buried in wreckage," said Didzun. He and Allen had only cuts and bruises.

The trusses sliced away the whole southeast corner of the building, smashing through both second and first floor offices.

Down in a basement office was Marvin Larson when everything suddenly tumbled down and filled his office. He also escaped with only cuts and bruises.

The 300-foot-long trusses, 40 feet high, were to be taken by barge
