Hatfield Calls Meeting On State Economic Ills

SALEM (AP) — Gov. Mark O. Hatfield Monday called a statewide conference on the economic ills of Oregon for Feb. 14, and struck anew at the state Public Welfare Commission.

Hatfield told his weekly news conference that some 50 labor, business, educational and other leaders will be invited to the economic conference in Salem.

Its purpose will be to see what ills plague Oregon economically, and then come up with recommendations for improvements in the state's general economic climate.

The prime reason for the conference, but not the only one, is the sharp drop in the price of plywood, he said.

Hatfield said planning for the meeting is under way by Jack Leonard, Willamette University economics professor; Wesley Ballaine of the University of Oregon, and Fred Gast, comptroller for United Grocers.

The delegates, Hatfield said, will convene for a three-hour briefing Feb. 14. They will then adjourn, he said, and set a meeting date some two weeks later to come back and take up solutions.

Of his disagreement with the Welfare Commission, Hatfield said it is a composite of many things. He accused the commission of bogging down in administrative chaos.

Hatfield said the Department of Finance objected to a commission increase of 15 per cent in food allotment because the legislature had considered and turned it down.

He said it is the job of the administrative branch to carry out the intent of the legislature. But he said one commissioner, Gerson Goldsmith, was quoted as saying: "I think the legislature's action is irrelevant."

Hatfield also criticized House Speaker Robert Duncan, D-Medford, for saying if welfare abuses are legislative business, then moving the commission is also.

Hatfield said that moving the commission offices from Portland to Salem is clearly an administrative prerogative and that the attorney general has said this. On the other hand, he said, the abuses in welfare have to do with structure and only the legislature can deal with this.

Welcome For Windsors Petition Circulated

LONDON (UPI) — Royal circles said today there was little chance the Duke and Duchess of Windsor ever would make their home in Britain even if a petition for their return is presented to Queen Elizabeth.

The duke abdicated as King Edward VIII 25 years to marry the American divorcee, Wallis Warfield of Baltimore. Since then they have lived in Paris, the Bahamas and the United States. They have visited here from time to time but only for periods of a few days.

Barrington-Hudson said his idea was to get up a petition in the town of Windsor which would be handed to the queen with the request that she intimate "beyond all shadow of doubt" that there is no barrier to residence in this country by the duke and duchess.

"This is a plea for tolerance," he said. "Many Windsor people have personal memories and associations with the duke and there need be no conflict of interest if he returns to live with his wife in a private capacity."

First reactions to Barrington-Hudson's proposals were cold. Other Liberal Party leaders and Con-

Molesting Of Graves Reported

EUGENE (AP) — The second report of grave molesting within a week was under investigation Monday by the Lane County sheriff's office.

In the latest incident, three graves were reported dug up in the Sailor Cemetery, near Noti, in western Lane County. Deputy Sheriff Dave Burks said the bones of a person buried in 1925 had been taken from one grave and piled beside it.

The other two graves had been dug into, but apparently the coffins in them had not been disturbed, Burks said.

The sheriff's office last week received a report that a grave had been molested in the Camp Creek Cemetery near Wainville in eastern Lane County.

Deputy Larry Moore said a hole about three feet deep had been dug into the grave, but he could find no further evidence of anything having been disturbed.

Legislators Remain Split On Bridge Building Plan

PORTLAND (AP) — Oregon and Washington legislators still are far apart on their proposals for financing construction of a four-mile bridge across the Columbia River between Astoria, Ore., and Megler, Wash.

At the last session of the Oregon legislature a bill was passed to build the $24 million bridge, providing Washington paid half the cost.

Washington Sen. Nat Washington, D-Ephrata, said he thought the 50-50 proposal would not be acceptable to Washington.

Oregon Rep. William Holstrom, D-Astoria, said he thought the ratio should be 58 per cent for Oregon and 42 per cent for Washington.

Other guests at the banquet included W. E. Drevlow, lieutenant governor of Idaho, and Idaho Land Commissioner John Walters, chairman of the Idaho Democratic Party.

Speaker Lauds Solons' Speed

ONTARIO, Ore. (AP) — Speaker of the Oregon House of Representatives Robert Duncan, D-Medford, said Saturday that the state legislature is 2½ weeks ahead of where it was at the last session.

Duncan was in this Eastern Oregon city to address a banquet celebrating the inauguration of President Kennedy.

He said the only stumbling block he could foresee was the question of reapportionment.

Other guests at the banquet included W. E. Drevlow, lieutenant governor of Idaho, and Idaho Land Commissioner John Walters, chairman of the Idaho Democratic Party.
