Shoot the Tunnel By Ransom Moore

Ten boys make a line of players. Ten more make another line. All stand close to each other with feet wide apart. The first one in each line holds a ball.

A bystander shouts, "Shoot the ball!" The leader in each line then throws the ball between his feet and the next boy's feet and so on down to the last boy in line, who runs with it to the head of the line and throws it the same way. This keeps on until each boy has been leader; the first line through wins.

Let's Draw a Hummingbird By Ann Davidow

In the summer have you seen
A ruby-throated bird of green
Stop above a daffodil
And sip the nectar through his bill,

Held by little wings that flutter
Faster than a camera shutter?
Their purring sound gives us the word
By which we know him, "Hummingbird."
