Stamps In The News

By SYD KRONISH

The signs of the Zodiac are the subjects of a new set of 13 stamps issued by Israel.

Each of the first 12 stamps will show a different sign. The 13th and highest value will combine the signs and symbols of the 12 constellations comprising the Zodiac. The values are: 1 agorot, 2 ag., 6 ag., 7 ag., 8 ag., 10 ag., 12 ag., 18 ag., 20 ag., 25 ag., 32 ag., 50 ag. and one pound.

First day covers bearing the set of 13 stamps will be available in complete sets only—the lowest six values on one envelope, the next six higher values on a second envelope and the 13th on a separate envelope.

Collectors will be able to purchase these stamps and first day and blue stamp to commemorate the participation of Ecuador in the First Philatelic Congress in Barcelona, Spain. The stamp will illustrate the oldest church of Ecuador—El Belen in Quito. It was founded by Sebastian de Benalcazar over the ruins of Quito immediately after the Spanish conquest of that country.

Greece has issued a 2.50 drachmas commemorative stamp honoring the victory of Crown Prince Constantine and his crew at the 1960 Olympic Games in Rome. The Crown Prince won a gold medal in the Dragon class yacht racing. Greece previously issued an Olympic set of 11 values but this, of course, was prior to the yachting victory.

Boy Inspires Preparing Of Braille Encyclopeda

CHICAGO (UPI) — Ten-year-old Michael Esserman of Great Neck, N.Y., could read many books in Braille. He could write in Braille. And he could do his arithmetic in Braille.

But when he wanted to look up something in a reference work, he had to ask someone to do it for him.

So did all his blind schoolmates. Michael and his blind friends attending public schools in the Great Neck area had no major reference works in Braille because there weren't any available, except for a 36-volume Webster's Dictionary.

Michael's mother, Mrs. Howard Esserman, and 95 other Great Neck women decided to do something about it.

Children in Nassau and Suffolk counties, N.Y., had plenty of textbooks and flashcards transcribed by volunteers of the Sisterhood of Temple Beth El. They even had three-dimensional picture books made with paper, fur, fabric and leather, a project developed by Mrs. Esserman. The Three Bears sported, real fur coats.

The women, under their chairman, Mrs. Dorothea Wahrburg, decided to rewrite an encyclopedia in Braille. Their goal, after years of hand printing, was to be a single encyclopedia set.

Next month (March), three years later, the first of about 300 Braille encyclopedia sets will be finished at the non-profit American Printing House for the Blind at Louisville, Ky.

The first major reference work for the blind, the giant, 145-volume sets are the answer to a letter written by Mrs. Esserman to Field Enterprises Educational Corp., Chicago, which publishes the "World Book Encyclopedia."

"Youngsters have only one source of information, their textbooks," Mrs. Esserman wrote March 17, 1958. "Our Braille group . . . wants to transcribe the 'World Book' into Braille."

"Can your firm put at our disposal a complete set of encyclopedia?" she asked. "We will work as fast and as accurately as possible."

Bailey K. Howard, president of Field Enterprises Educational Corp., talked with the women at a luncheon in New York. Then he assigned Dr. William H. Nault, director of educational research for the encyclopedia, to investigate the possibility of publishing a Braille edition.

"Educators of the blind unanimously endorsed the idea," said Nault, a native of Battle Creek, Mich., a former school administrator at Ridgewood, N.J. "But they felt it was impossible."

The Field Foundation, headed by now United Nations Ambassador Adlai Stevenson, contributed $60,000 and Field Enterprises added another $55,500, Nault said. The funds were sent to the American Printing House for the Blind, the biggest Braille book producer in the world.

Editing the encyclopedia for transcription into Braille turned into a 15-month job. The Braille publication contains some hand-tooled diagrams and line drawings. But all reference to maps and other illustrations had to be rewritten.

Marjorie S. Hooper, chief editor of the printing house, took charge of rewriting and such baffling problems as a Braille article on color.

"That was a corker," said Nault, who passed on the final result.

Rewriting also became a chore in dealing with such topics as geography, without maps; bird watching, without pictures, and crystallization, without complex diagrams.

Storage space also was a problem. But that was solved by shipping out each volume as it was completed.

The regular edition of the encyclopedia, 20 volumes, takes about 30 inches of shelf space, Nault said. The Braille edition fills 43 feet and weighs about 700 pounds.

Nault said distribution of the Braille volumes by the Louisville printing house was expected to cover much of the English-speaking world. He said all blind institutions in the United States and Canada were told of the project as well as others in the Commonwealth nations.

Cost of creating the Braille edition was $75,000, Nault said. In addition, production costs amounted to $616.25.

Nault said 200 sets would be offered to selected institutions for the blind at $200 below cost and the other sets would be sold for cost.

Helen Keller, author and lecturer who is both deaf and blind, valued the work another way:

"It will truly be a precious instrument of education for the blind," she said.

Nationalist China issued on Feb. 4 (Farmer's Day in that country) three new stamps honoring the "Census of Agriculture." The design features a farmer and his tractor to indicate rural progress in mechanization. The Census of Agriculture emblem appears in the upper right corner.

First day cover collectors desiring service on the first United Nations commemorative stamp of 1961 (International Court of Justice) on Feb. 13 are reminded that first day service is given only at U.N. Headquarters in New York. Envelopes should be sent to the U.N. Postal Administration, United Nations, N.Y., prior to the date of issuance together with remittance to cover the cost of the stamps to be affixed. There are two stamps in the set, 4 cents and 8 cents.

SMALL PORTION

McALESTER, Okla. (AP) — W. M. Woody, a guard at the state prison, commented on the fine taste of cookies made by penitentiary cooks. His wife asked for the recipe. He told her it was 600 pounds of flour, four cases of eggs, three cans of lard, 20 gallons of milk and so on. Later his wife surprised him by presenting him some of the cookies. She explained she figured out the recipe by dividing it by 640.

HELPS CONVICTS ESCAPE

LONDON (UPI)—Prison guard William George Alston, 34, was jailed Wednesday to await trial on charges of selling escape kits including hacksaw blades and cell keys to three convicts at Pentonville Prison. All escaped but were recaptured.
