PCL Prexy Claims Pitchers Are Freaks; Stirs Up Storm

SEATTLE (AP) — "Pitchers," Dewey Soriano said Friday, "are freaks."

Former major and minor league pitcher Soriano, now president of the Pacific Coast League went to bat in behalf of his plan to keep pitchers from going to bat.

"Eight players on a baseball team are hitters and the ninth is a throwing machine," he said. "How many pitchers can hit? The batting average of the average pitcher won't top .150.

"Any other player on the team, catcher included, with such an anemic average wouldn't be allowed on the field."

Soriano stirred up a storm of discussion a few weeks ago when he suggested that his league adopt what has been tabbed a "wild card" plan of substituting hitters for pitchers.

Directors of the league approved the idea and asked him to present it to the national baseball rules committee. These same directors, due to meet here Saturday, may authorize Soriano to put the plan into effect this season in the PCL.

"Any league has the right to try out a new idea," he said. "The rules committee has not yet acted upon the suggestion but I have heard no opposition from its members. The majority of the Coast League directors favored the plan at our last meeting."

This would not be a wild card substitution plan such as the one now standard in football, with players bobbing in and out of the lineup. Soriano would permit a team manager, if he wished, to designate some other player to hit for the pitcher.

Once the game started with a substitute hitter in the lineup, this 10th man could never play defense and the pitcher could not hit. They could be replaced, but the replacements would be governed by the same rule.

Managers blessed with such hitting pitchers as Vernon Law of Pittsburgh or Warren Spahn of Milwaukee probably would choose to let the moundsmen take his own time at bat, Soriano noted.

ENOUGH FISH FOR ONE DAY—Chet Blacksmith figured he could safely call it a day after battling this 32-inch, 24-pound Klamath Lake trout for nearly an hour Thursday. The monster cleared the water in spectacular leaps six or seven times before Blacksmith could haul him to shore off the point at Wocus Bay. Fishing from the bank, Blacksmith was using minnows as bait.

'Too Many Centers' Says Olympic Boss

NEW YORK — Pete Newell, coach of America's Olympic basketball championship team, claimed today the squad had too many tall players who were weak on ball-handling and defense.

Of the 12 players picked for the American Olympic team, there were "too many boys who were essentially centers," Newell said in the current issue of Look magazine.

"This made it impossible to substitute as a group without detracting from team balance," Newell declared. "In a close game, with much fouling-out, this could be perilous."

Newell proposed in Look that, in addition to height and scoring ability, players should be chosen who can "operate without the ball," that is, pass, screen, maneuver and defend.

Newell also urged that the selection of the Olympic squad "be divorced from all politicking."

"There should be no compulsion to select a player because the National Collegiate Athletic Association or the Amateur Athletic Union or the armed forces all should be represented," Newell contended. "The sole determining factor should be ability. Who are the best 12 players for our purposes?"

Cal Cagers Experiment

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI) — California's basketball team, acting on a suggestion by athletic director Pete Newell, will play an experimental intrasquad game March 15 with the hoops elevated from 10 to 12 feet.

Newell has long been an exponent of the higher basket. He feels that interest in the game is waning because the big players find it easy to score with "dunk shots" and dominate all phases of the game as it is now played.

The California squad will practice shooting at the higher basket on the day before the game. According to Bear head coach Rene Herrerias, coaches and newspapermen from around the area are being invited to watch the contest.

"It's going to be interesting to see what happens," Herrerias said Thursday. "The big men will really have to shoot now. The jump shot will have to travel on an arc. And we'll get a general idea on whether the smaller player can benefit."

Herrerias said that the new height might be proposed to the rules committee by California "if we think it can help the game."
