

Klamath Civic Theater Presents "The Tender Trap," Three Act Comedy

SOCIETY

By Helen Bechen
Klamath Falls, Oregon March 5, 1961

ALICE GILBERT, theater director, is also adept in the use of proper stage make-up. She is shown above making up Anna Marie Eck for her role of Jessica Collins, one of the women in the life of the New York playboy leading man.

PETE LUNGREEN as Charlie Reader, leading man, tries to explain how he became engaged to two attractive young ladies, Julie Gillis, the Tender Trap, played by Tricia Gilbert, left, and Sylvia, portrayed by Pat Bradshaw, center.

BILL BARTHOLOMEW, who plays Earl Lindquist in the comedy, takes his turn at operating the lighting panel.

ADJUSTING the spotlight is the chore of Bob McQuown.

THE KLAMATH CIVIC THEATER of approximately 30 active members first organized last September. Although a small group, these energetic thespians enjoy taking part in all facets of a stage production as these photos show.

"THE TENDER TRAP," a three-act comedy by Max Shulman and Robert Paul Smith, is the amusing story of attractive, glamorous Charlie Reader, New York playboy, who finds himself constantly surrounded by women. The play was well received when presented Friday and Saturday evenings this weekend at the OTJ Theater. It will be staged again at the same theater Friday and Saturday, March 10 and 11.

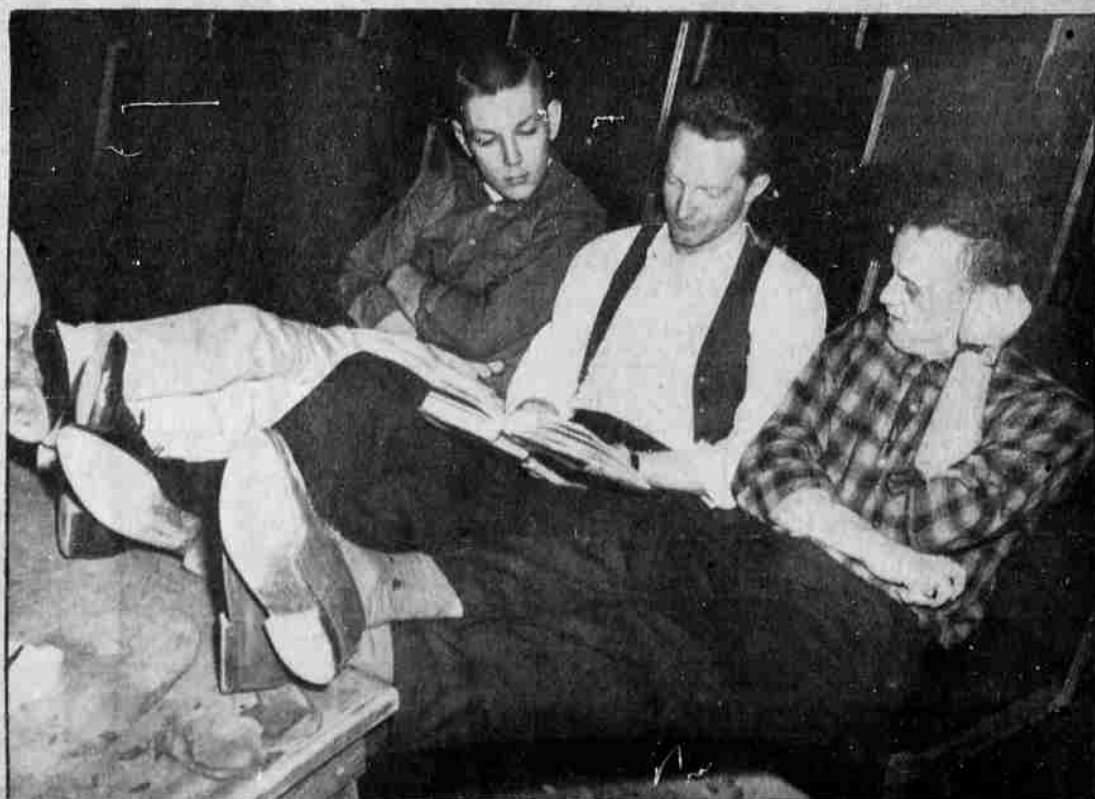

PETE LUNGREEN gives a hand to Bill Bartholomew, on the ladder.

— Photos by Guderian.

TWO CASTS were present for the rehearsal, the play cast and the one on the broken leg of Betty Ramsey, president of the theater group. Bill Bartholomew autographs the cast as Rich Peer, left, Pat Bradshaw and Pete Lungreen, right, look on.

A FIVE MINUTE breather is taken by Bill Bartholomew, Rich Peer and Bob McQuown. Rich Peer plays the part of Sol Swartz in the comedy.