Puzzle— The Purchase of Manhattan Island By Hans Kreis

Find two axes, one spade, one hammer, and one frying pan in this picture of the Dutch settlers trading with the Indians. Manhattan was purchased, you know, for various tools and goods worth about $24.

An Obstacle Race By Evelyn Pickering

Build an obstacle course with small objects such as pillows, books, a pail, etc. Form two teams. One player from each team is told to walk, not run, the course, trying to miss the objects. Now blindfold them, and tell them to walk the course again.

The fun is that you remove all of the obstacles after they are blindfolded so they carefully travel an empty course!

Hello Wizard! By Alan Jacobs

This is the most mysterious trick we have ever come across. Suppose a friend asked you to name a card (suit and number), and then he calmly picked up the phone, put through a call, said, "Hello, Wizard," and then handed the phone to you!

Then when you said, "What card did I name?" a strange sing-song voice would tell you correctly—and hang up!

Here's how it is done.

You need a partner, a member of your family or a friend who knows when he is addressed on the phone by the words, "Hello, Wizard," that he must begin counting slowly and clearly—"1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, jack, queen, king." The caller interrupts the counting at the number wanted by saying, "Is that you, Wizard?" Immediately, the partner switches to naming card suits—hearts, diamonds, clubs, spades.

When the correct suit is mentioned, the caller interrupts again with, "I have someone here who wants to ask you a question." In this way, the partner is ready with the answer even before the person is put on the phone. Using a spooky-sounding voice he says, "Your card is the 10 of hearts," or six of clubs, or whatever it is, and then hangs up!

Riddles!

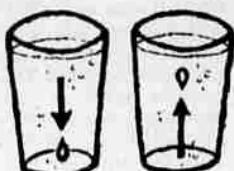

1. Why is it difficult for a leopard to hide?
2. What bird helps you eat?
3. Why are convicts such slow writers?

Answers:

1. Because everywhere it goes it's spotted.
2. Because it takes them down.
3. Because everywhere it goes it's spotted.

Abracadabra!

Did you ever make a grape seed move up and down in a glass of ginger ale? Call it magic and say, "Abracadabra!" Then drop the seed in the glass. When it reaches the bottom, just wave your hand close to the glass. The seed will rise. Wave once more and it will go back down to the bottom. As long as the ginger ale bubbles, you can continue.
