RETURNING to Portland is the R. P. (Dick) Laudenschlager family, which has resided in this city the past three years while he was manager of the Bank of Klamath Falls. On Feb. 27 he became affiliated with the Security Bank of Oregon in Portland, the family's former home. He will be joined in the near future by his wife and daughter, Gretchen, 7, student at Sacred Heart Academy, and Mrs. Laudenschlager's mother, Mrs. Catherine Harshman, who makes her home with them. Both the Laudenschlagers were active in affairs of Sacred Heart Church. He also served on the board of directors of United Fund, Kiwanis Club and Chamber of Commerce.

A CALL to the pastorate of the First Baptist Church brought the Rev. and Mrs. Mack P. Jones to Klamath Falls from Eugene where they had resided for four years. Both are natives of Mississippi. He was graduated from Mississippi College in Clinton and New Orleans Baptist Theological Seminary. Mrs. Jones is a graduate of Mississippi Southern College, Hattiesburg, and worked toward a masters degree at the New Orleans seminary. An accomplished musician and honor student, she was elected to the Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities. The couple were both very active in church and musical circles in Eugene.

RETURNING to this city after three and a half years is the family of the Rev. Silas H. Jones, who is the permanent pastor of the new Victory Temple, 1909 Homedale Road. Mrs. Catherine Jones assists her husband with services as a pianist and soloist. The Joneses have two sons, Robert H., 17, a senior at Klamath Union High School, and Gary Lynn, 5 1/2. The older boy plays trombone at many church services.

NEW PASTOR of Hope Lutheran Church is the Rev. Warren W. Pechman, who assumed his position Feb. 1. He and his wife and three daughters, Marsha, 10, Becky, 6, and Nancy, 3, have resided the past six years in Salem. Pastor Pechman, native of Colorado, attended Denver University and Oberlin College and was graduated from Doane College of Crete, Neb., and Central Lutheran Seminary, Fremont, Neb. While serving at Trinity Lutheran Church of Appleton, Wis., he met and married his wife, Adeline.

NEWCOMERS to Klamath Falls last fall were Pastor and Mrs. Kenneth H. McVay and their family. He serves as minister of the Seventh Day Adventist Church. Their family includes Bill, student at Columbia Academy near Portland; Jeanne, who attends the Adventist School here, and John, pre-school age. The McVays are from Spokane and attended Walla Walla College where he was graduated with a major in biblical languages. Mrs. McVay often serves as church pianist and assists with the lower grades in Sabbath School. The family resides at 2903 South Patterson Street.
