

False Pregnancy Embarrasses Wife

By ANN LANDERS
Dear Ann Landers: I'm so embarrassed I can't find the words to express myself. I've been married seven years and I have a wonderful family. We wanted a child from the beginning, but have had no success. The doctors have told us we are both healthy and there is no reason why we shouldn't have children some day.

About three months ago I began to feel sick in the morning. I was thrilled. My husband even got sick he was so happy. I gained eight pounds, bought maternity dresses and told everyone the good news.

Yesterday I went to the doctor for my first check-up and he told me I am not pregnant. I'm so embarrassed I can't show my face. What shall I tell my friends? They will think I am crazy. Have you ever heard of this happening to anyone else?

—FALSE ALARM

Dear Ann: Yes I have heard of this. The medical term is pseudocyesis. In plain English it is hysteria.

The mind can play all sorts of tricks on the body. It is not difficult to experience symptoms of a physical condition if you concentrate on it.

Tell your friends the story cancelled the order. No details are necessary. And relax. About one out of five pregnancies ends in an early cancellation.

Dear Ann Landers: My wife and I have been married for 11 years and we have four fine children. There is very little arguing in our family.

Last night I took our son to a Cub Scout meeting. When he raised his hand to give the pledge I noticed all the buttons on his sleeve were missing. I asked him about it and he said "Mom promised she'd sew them on when she found time."

I know how to sew on buttons—I learned in the Navy. I have always sewed on my own missing buttons because my wife neglects this chore. I really don't mind doing it. Should I insist that she sew the buttons on because it's her job, or should I sew them on myself and say nothing?—P-JACKET

Dear P.J.: Of course this is your wife's job, but apparently she has a fix on sewing buttons. Since peace reigns supreme in your home and you want to keep things calm, turn the situation into a good-natured joke. Sew the buttons on yourself and make a project of teaching your son how to do it—in case he marries a girl just like the girl who married dear old dad.

Dear Ann: I was married less than a month ago and my husband band and I just moved to this city. He is well acquainted here, but I am a stranger.

My husband keeps urging me to phone the wives of his co-workers and invite them over to have coffee and get acquainted. I am not a formal person, nor am I "stand-offish" but I do feel that I should wait until these women call me. He says I'm stiff-necked and that nobody stands on ceremony any more. Who is right?—D.P.

Dear D.P.: You are right. Don't let your husband talk you into appearing aggressive and ill-mannered.

It is improper for a bride to phone strangers and invite them to her "get acquainted." Wait until you are called—or join some organizations and make friends this way.

To learn the difference between a marriage that "settles down" and one that "gets dull," send for Ann Landers' booklet, "What To Expect From Marriage," enclosing with your request 20 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Agents Plan Hay School

A hay quality school arranged by Klamath County agents at which protein testing and its use in hay marketing in Washington state will be explained has been scheduled for Wednesday, March 22, at the fairgrounds.

Two separate sessions have been arranged. The same information is to be presented at both times. An afternoon meeting will begin at 1:30. An evening meeting starting at 7:30 was arranged also to accommodate around 40 hay growers whose return post cards indicated a preference for an evening meeting.

Hay production in the Basin occupies 82,500 acres of which 37,300 acres are alfalfa, reports County Agent Walt Jendrzejewski. Value of the 1960 hay crop of 225,000 tons was estimated at $4,469,000.

Problems of production, hay making, and hay marketing are subjects scheduled for discussion. Use of moisture meters as an aid in determining when hay is ready to bale will be discussed.

The school will include material presented by the Union Pacific Railroad demonstration car in a number of different communities in the Northwest earlier this winter.

Present to assist Klamath agents with the meeting here will be Norman Goetze, OSU farm crops specialist; Ray Teal, OSU marketing specialist, and Howard Fugli from the Oregon Farm Bureau State Office.

Mall Measure Is Amended

SALEM (AP)—The Senate State and Federal Affairs Committee Monday amended a bill that would do away with a part of the proposed Capitol Mall in Salem to let previous owners get it back.

The bill would have the state sell back the 40 per cent of the property it has purchased in the D to Union Street area across the railroad tracks from the Capitol.

The amendment would give the persons who owned the property before the state bought it a chance to re-acquire it for the sale price, plus the cost of any improvements made by the state. However, this offer would be good only two years.

Committee Chairman Walter Pearson, D-Portland, said Mall plans call for an auditorium and concert hall.

"Why should the state provide an auditorium for the city of Salem?" Pearson asked. "There is no sense in buying all this expensive land in Salem to put in all this stuff we don't need anyway."

Pearson said the governor's budget calls for $500,000 for land purchase in the Mall area, and if this bill passes, then the Joint Ways and Means Committee does not have to appropriate that money.

"Don't Worry About Politics," Rusk Tells Diplomats

WASHINGTON (AP)—Secretary of State Dean Rusk has told U. S. diplomats around the world not to worry too much about domestic U. S. politics.

American politics, Rusk said, are a problem for President Kennedy and his top aides, while "our business is foreign policy."

Rusk outlined his views to top State Department officers in a private speech a month ago. The department sent copies to U.S. envoys abroad and also made them available to newsmen.

While the support of American public opinion is important for foreign policy, Rusk said, "we do not want policy officers below the level of presidential appointees to concern themselves too much with problems of domestic politics in recommending foreign policy action."

"What the American people will do turns in large degree of their leadership. We cannot test public opinion until the President and the leaders of the country have gone to the public to explain what is required and have asked them for support for the necessary action."

Rusk headed for Washington today following a speech at Founders Day ceremonies at the University of California.

Rusk used the occasion to give renewed emphasis to a previous U. S. policy: He saw a need for "a permanent United Nations force, specifically trained and equipped, held in readiness for immediate use."

The foreign policy chief said the desirability of a permanent stand-by U. N. force has been demonstrated by the experience in the Congo where U. N. Secretary General Dag Hammarskjold has been hampered by troubles in getting nations to supply troops and by decisions of home governments to suddenly withdraw them.

Rusk also:

Suggested smaller nations should enter into disarmament agreements among themselves, both to do away with arms race waste and to avoid being sucked into the big power arms contest.

He particularly mentioned Latin American countries.

Described big power arms control as "an imperative goal" which must be pursued without yielding to cynicism or despair over past failures to reach agreement.

Accused the Communists of reaching for domination throughout the newly developing areas of the world, and warned against underrating "the formidable contest in which we shall be engaged in the decade of the 60s."

Klamath Youth Takes Training

Army Pvt. Theodore I. Williams, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ted T. Williams, 1775 Etna, Klamath Falls, is receiving the final phase of the six months active duty military training under the Reserve Forces Act program at the Air Defense School, Fort Bliss, Tex. The training is scheduled to be concluded March 27.

During this final phase, Williams is being trained in the duties of a radar crewman.

Upon completion of this training, he is scheduled to spend the remainder of his military service with the 249th Artillery of the Battery C, an Army National Guard unit in Klamath Falls.

"The Air Defense School, the largest military school in the nation, trains personnel to man and maintain the guided missile systems employed in the air defense of the U.S. by our armies overseas and by our allies of the NATO and SEATO nations.

Williams received basin training at Fort Ord, Calif.

Before going on active duty, the 20-year-old soldier was employed by the Southern Pacific Railroad.

'Mum' Looks Like Word For New Administration

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst
WASHINGTON (AP)—Mum looks like more than just a word in the Kennedy administration. It looks like a system.

It goes this way for the top men around the President: If you have something big to say, let Kennedy say it.

Take G. Mennen Williams, for instance.

This six-term governor of Michigan and now assistant secretary of state for African affairs was never renowned for his quietude.

Even on his just-completed tour of Africa some American allies felt he talked too much when he simply said: Africa for the Africans.

When he returned Monday he spoke pretty freely to reporters on everything except what they most wanted to know: What did he recommend to Kennedy?

He said he'd leave it up to the President to disclose that, if he wanted to.

Then there was Robert S. McNamara who goofed when he talked and has said practically nothing since.

Early last February McNamara, secretary of defense, told reporters he couldn't find a missile gap. For the Democrats this was almost as bad as if he had said he didn't believe in home and mother. All through the 1960 political year the Democrats worried out loud that Russia was ahead in missiles.

Even Kennedy in the campaign talked of the "missile gap."

Kennedy lost no time telling reporters there really couldn't be any conclusions on missiles yet because McNamara hadn't finished studying them.

Later, in a letter to Republican Senate Leader Everett M. Dirksen, McNamara denied that he had said the United States was either behind or ahead of Russia in the missile race.

One member of the Kennedy cabinet—Arthur Goldberg, secretary of labor—has probably made more public statements than all the other members put together.

But it might be noted any opinions he expressed, mostly about unemployment and depressed areas, were only echoes of what Kennedy had said.

So Goldberg's speeches, statements and trips around have really been missionary work for Kennedy's program.

The two most forceful secretaries of state in recent years—Dean Acheson under President Truman and John Foster Dulles under President Eisenhower—were great talkers on their own.

But Kennedy's secretary of state, Dean Rusk, has played in a low key, letting his boss do the main talking on foreign affairs.

This was the answer: That's very perceptive.

As for the rest of the Kennedy Cabinet: They're sticking to their knitting. So far this has been a one man show, Kennedy's.
