Two Sentenced To Penitentiary After Circuit Court Hearings

Two men were given 18-month penitentiary sentences Tuesday by Circuit Judge David R. Vandenberg, one for larceny and the other for a probation violation.

Charles R. Hoxie, 24, a former Kingsley Field airman, was sentenced on the larceny charge. He pleaded guilty Tuesday and waived the two-day waiting period for sentencing. He admitted stealing about $40 from a coin changing machine on July 27 from the Econ-O-Wash Laundromat, 3622 South Sixth Street.

William R. Bradshaw, Hoxie's court appointed attorney, asked the judge to give "serious consideration" to probation. He said Hoxie had been brought up in foster homes and had no previous felony convictions. He said Hoxie's troubles were due primarily to drinking.

Deputy District Attorney Robert M. Reading said Hoxie received a bad conduct discharge in March from the Air Force after he stole some money and some gas.

Judge Vandenberg also heard these pleas Tuesday.

Delmar R. McMullen, 42, Roseburg, pleaded guilty to obtaining money and property by false pretenses. He will be sentenced Friday morning.

Two men pleaded not guilty to the crime of assault with intent to kill. They were Edward T. Kilgough, 31, Route 3, Box 1140 C, and Sammy R. McKnight, 32, of 1734 Lark Street. Kilgough's trial was set for Oct. 2 and McKnight's for Oct. 25.

55 Pretty Girls Compete For Miss America Crown

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (UPI) — Fifty-five pretty girls hid their nerves with straight backs and bright smiles today and got down to competing in earnest at the Atlantic City beauty contest.

Nineteen of them, in groups of three and four, will have their first crucial meeting with the 11 pageant judges this afternoon and compete tonight in the first Convention Hall evening gown preliminaries. Eighteen will do bathing suits for the be-ribboned runway coronation, long associated with the 40-year-old Atlantic City beauty contest. The remaining 18, including Miss Hawaii who gamely plans to try her soprano solo despite severe laryngitis, compete in talent preliminaries.

The three groups, dubbed "Rose," "Carnation" and "Chrysanthemum," will alternate these roles Thursday and Friday until all have competed in three categories and had their white-gloves-and-best-manners chats with the three women and five men who will award the crown on Saturday night.

Winners of talent and bathing suit competitions, but not evening dress parades, will be announced each night. All announced preliminary winners are assured at least $1,000 scholarship awards, as are six top judged performers in talent categories.

Dad's Television Bothers Mother

By ANN LANDERS
Dear Ann Landers: For six years I've been married to a man who is married to the television set. We have three TV sets in our home and he keeps them all on so when he has to go from one room to another he won't miss anything.

Last week there was an electrical storm and all the power went off. We had our best conversation since TV was invented. He told me what was happening at the business and I told him things the kids were saying and doing. It was as if he'd been out of town for a couple of years.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a widower who has been dating a widow for seven months. I am 53 and she is 45. I want to marry her but she is not ready to give me a final answer just yet. She goes with a few other men but I have reason to believe she prefers me.

The problem is that she has been affectionate in private but when any of her family is around, particularly her children, she refuses to let me even hold her hand. I think this is pretty foolish for a woman her age. I resent not being able to express my real feelings for her whenever I wish. Am I right when I say she is not open and above board?

Dear Frank: Sorry, but I think the woman is showing good judgment. Apparently she isn't ready to announce that there is more than just friendship between you and she is behaving with taste and discretion.

Dear No Match: It's up to you to prove to your husband that people can be more interesting than pictures. A wife who doesn't know how to compete with a seven-year-old movie isn't much of a woman.

Make social plans a couple of times a week. Have people in and go out with friends. Once you've made the arrangements he'll go. And if they're good arrangements he'll be glad he did.

Dear Ann: Our child was born four days too late to get into public school this fall. My husband and I are furious with the authorities because they refuse to make an exception.

Harold is a very bright child and can hold his own with children who are a year or two older than he is. If he were judged on the basis of his vocabulary and comprehension he would qualify for the first or second grade.

We feel that the school system is archaic and that entrance into the first grade should be based on what children know, not when they were born. May we hear your views?

Dear R.L.: Experts in education say it is better for a child to enter school a little late than a little early.

Such children learn to read more rapidly and they get along better with other youngsters. Precocious children often run into trouble because their emotional development lags behind their intellectual development. Putting them in with older children can be a serious mistake.

Keep your bright child occupied at home with stimulating interests, and don't feel that the school authorities are being unreasonable. They are doing you—and your child—a greater service than you realize.

Lead Trade Deal Fixed

VANCOUVER, B.C. (AP) — A Canadian mining firm has completed a deal to trade lead to the United States government for surplus agricultural products, the Vancouver Province says.

The newspaper said the plan was negotiated between Consolidated Mining and Smelting Co. and the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

The company will deliver 35,000 tons of lead valued at $10 million to the U.S. government for stocking in economic need. Proceeds of the sales will go to the company as payment, the newspaper reported.

The Province said the deal is half of a two-pronged move by the U.S. to reduce world lead stockpiles by 100,000 tons. A similar deal, involving about $8 million, has been completed with Broken Hill Associated Smelters Proprietary Ltd. of Australia, it reported.

The newspaper said the effect of the move would be large to maintain or stabilize world lead prices.

The U.S. Supreme Court has overruled its own decision on infrequent occasions.

New Drug Label Would Tell Side Effects

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Starting next March 5, U.S. drug manufacturers will be required to include in each package of drugs a statement on any harmful side effects.

The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) announced the new order Tuesday. The tightening of regulations previously had been opposed by the drug industry and the American Medical Association.

Under the new order, a brochure containing complete information on a drug's qualities will be included in every shipment to doctors, druggists and hospitals. This "package insert" also will include details on any of the drug's side effects that might injure users.

"When this requirement becomes fully effective, it will make the complete information readily available to practitioners at every drug store and hospital pharmacy throughout the country," FDA Commissioner George P. Larrick said.

In addition, he said, the new requirement will call for the drug industry to include full side-effect information on samples they commonly distribute directly to physicians.

Larrick said the drug chloromycetin figured in the situation leading up to Tuesday's announcement. He said chloromycetin was "an example" of drugs which have hazardous side effects which should be made fully known.
