We The Women To Volunteer Husbands Women Too Eager

Ruth Millett
Vesper Enterprise Assn.

News item from Nashville, Tenn.: "The draft board reported a Nashville woman telephoned to volunteer her husband's services to the Army—without his knowledge."

What the helpful housewife probably said was, "If you need men, George will be glad to join up."

With so many wives always on the ready to volunteer their husband's services, this kind of gesture was almost bound to happen.

The wife who gets into the habit of volunteering for her husband knows no limits.

She'll tell a neighbor who mentions that she has to call a plumber, "Oh, don't do that. Wait till George comes home and he'll do it for you."

She tells a friend who is temporarily without a car, "George has tomorrow off, and I know he'll be glad to let you use his car."

She will even offer a relative George's signature on a loan if the necessity arises. Then she explains to George, "I knew you wouldn't mind."

ices. None of them know how to say "No."

Chances are the Nashville George whose wife decided he might just as well go in the Army will probably wind up there. Some way or other, his wife will be able to convince him that he ought to go down and enlist. She will think it is the least she can do for her country.

Pair Wed In Reno Rites

ALTURAS—Eleanor Van Horn of Alturas and James Clark of Menlo Park were married Aug. 20 in a quiet ceremony at Reno. They will make their home in Alturas until mid-November and then will reside in Menlo Park.

IT'S SPARKY — Designed especially with the college crowd in mind is this famous make lipstick in the clearest of scarlets, a definite two-away from the over-whited or greyed shades that seemed smart a couple of years ago. Teamed with turquoise eye liner it gives a young, refreshed and fashionable look — absolutely right with fall's bright navy, ochre russets and scarlet reds.
