

Columbia Power Contract Signed

PORTLAND (AP)—An agreement under which both federal and non-federal hydroelectric plants in the Columbia River basin will be operated as though they have one owner was signed today by 11 agencies and companies.

Under the one-year compact, the federal government will receive $1.1 million from non-federal downstream power producers because of the assured capacity the upstream storage gives them. Smaller payments will be made among the non-federal parties for benefits they receive from various non-federal upstream storage.

Charles F. Luce, Bonneville administrator, said the compact, to run for one year, is a pilot plan expected to lead to long-term agreement.

It carries out the principle of a treaty recently approved between the United States and Canada under which Canada would get 50 per cent of the power generated in the United States as a result of upstream dams in Canada. The treaty has been ratified in the United States but still is pending in Canada.

The coordination set up in today's compact would be essential under the treaty but is desirable even without that, Luce said.

In general, it makes more power available through release of water from reservoirs at times when downstream plants can make maximum use of it. This has been done to an extent informally, Luce said, but the agreement today "assures the dependability of the approximate one million additional kilowatts resulting from the present coordination," and will add a substantial amount of firm power.

The City of Seattle refused to sign the agreement but said it would enter a separate agreement with Bonneville, Luce said. The City of Tacoma still is considering whether to sign and the Aluminum Co. of America, which owns a big block of power from Rocky Reach Dam, is expected to sign shortly.

Those signing today: Bonneville Power Administration; Corps of Engineers, the public utility districts of Grant, Chelan and Pend Oreille counties, Washington; City of Eugene; Montana Power Co.; Washington Water Power Co.; Puget Sound Power and Light Co.; Pacific Power and Light Co.; and Portland General Electric Co.

Supreme Court Studies Reapportionment Plan

SALEM (AP)—The Oregon Supreme Court has under study the constitutionality of the legislative reapportionment act. It has only 11 days to decide the issue.

If the court overrules the law it then will ask Secretary of State Howell Appling Jr. to prepare a new plan. Appling said he has five plans ready if the court asks him to draft one.

Oral arguments were aired Monday.

Edwin J. Peterson, Portland, and Douglas R. Spencer, Eugene, in asking the court to uphold the law said the major fraction rule made it impossible to apportion strictly by population.

This rule, as interpreted by Peterson and Spencer, gives a senator or representative to each county which has more than 30 per cent of the population required for a legislator.

To stay under the limit of 60 representatives and 30 senators with this rule, they contended, requires that some counties be shorted under the population provision.

Rep. Edward N. Fadeley, D-Eugene, said there is a way to comply with all of the provisions of the Constitution on reapportionment. He said under the major fraction rule that there would be

Police Nab Four Youths

Four youths were arrested over the weekend by state police in connection with a theft and a burglary.

Timothy B. Harris, 18, and a 17-year-old youth were taken in for questioning about an industrial microscope that had been stolen from Clyde V. Johnson of the Shasta Cattle Company in Malin. The microscope was valued at $650.

State police said both youths had worked for the company. They were arrested Friday afternoon after they allegedly tried to trade the microscope for a gun at a Klamath Falls pawn shop. Harris was booked at the county jail while the juvenile was held for juvenile authorities at the city jail.

Two young men were arrested Sunday morning after a reported burglary attempt at the T. P. Packing Company on the Old Midland Road. The men were William O. Stephenson, 19, Route 3, Box 46, and Harold F. Shepherd, 21, Prineville. They were apprehended near the packing company after they ran their car into a ditch.
