Technical Education Study Set

Technical Institute, American Society for Engineering Education, will conduct an "in depth" study of technical education in the United States. Funds for the study, some $47,000, have been appropriated from the National Science Foundation.

Serving on the national committee is R. W. Bingham, dean of education services at Oregon Technical Institute, Klamath Falls. Bingham directed the first National Science Foundation-sponsored summer institute for technical instructors at the University of Houston campus.

The ASEEE, in explaining the need for such a study, said, "Recent studies reveal an acute shortage of technological manpower in the U.S. This has a direct bearing on the future needs of society in general and on national security in particular."

ALASKAN NOW — Roxanne Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Wilson of Malin, is now teaching at Willow Crest Elementary School, Anchorage, Alaska. She is a graduate of Malin High School and Oregon State University.

River Waste Plan Needed

MISSOULA, Mont. (AP)—Pacific Northwest and Canadian pollution control administrators want a comprehensive control plan for the entire Columbia River Basin.

The Pacific Northwest Pollution Control Council met here Tuesday in advance of Wednesday's opening of a three-day meeting of the federal Water Pollution Control Advisory Board. The federal group will go to the Clark Fork River and Anaconda and Butte during its sessions.

A report the Northwest body planned to submit to the President's advisory group says in part:

"We certainly believe that waters that have not been adversely affected by industrial, agricultural or domestic development should be preserved in the best condition . . .

"Waters which are now of a quality below that which is advisable should be restored."

The Northwest Council includes administrators from Washington and Oregon.

Censorship Thrown Out

SALEM (AP)—The conviction of Nancy Welch, on grounds that her Guild Theater in Portland violated the city's censorship ordinance, was thrown out by the Oregon Supreme Court today.

The court didn't pass on the merits of the ordinance. It did imply that it might be unconstitutional on grounds of granting too much power to the chief of police.

The court, in a decision by Justice A. T. Goodwin, reversed the conviction because the complaint against her did not state a crime.

Reversing the Multnomah Circuit Court of Judge Paul R. Harris, the decision said that the complaint didn't say how the film involved ("The Lovers") fell short of any standard set by the city, nor why the censor ordered certain scenes deleted.

"The ordinance," the decision said, "purports to give to the chief of police some power to prevent the public display of obscenity, but the complaint did not charge that the picture or any part thereof was obscene."

The court added that if the police chief has power to order any picture changed to satisfy a censor, such interpretation would make the ordinance unconstitutional.

U.S. Moves To Halt Oil Combine

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The U.S. attorney general's office moved Tuesday to halt proposed acquisition of the assets of Honolulu Oil Corp. by Tidewater Oil Co. and Pan American Petroleum Corp.

The 7,800 stockholders of Honolulu were scheduled to meet Friday in San Francisco to vote on a proposal to sell its assets for about $362 million. But the Justice Department asserted in a suit filed in U.S. District Court here that the acquisition would violate both the Sherman and Clayton Anti-Trust Acts by depressing competition.

Honolulu Oil President L. A. Cranston said the defendants' counsel advised that the government's action is without merit. He said Honolulu and the other companies intended to contest the suit.

However, he said Friday's meeting had been postponed because of the suit. No new date has been set.

The action was filed by Lyle T. Jones, anti-trust chief in San Francisco, to prevent the proposed sale which was approved by the various companies in an agreement signed last May 15.

Honolulu, a producer of crude oil and natural gas, plans to turn Alexander Hamilton, first U.S. secretary of the treasury, is said to be the "father of the U.S. financial system."

all its assets west of the Rocky Mountains over the Tidewater and all east of the Rockies over to Pan American. Alaskan assets would be evenly divided between the two purchasers.
