Stocks NEW YORK STOCKS By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS. Wall Street NEW YORK (AP) - A mixed stock market displayed a down-side tendency late this afternoon. Trading was moderate. Volume for the day was estimated at 3.6 million shares compared with 3.43 million Tuesday. Gains and losses of fractions to a point or so prevailed among most key stocks. Wider moves occurred in specially situated issues.

Y. Herrera Convicted Of Burglary

Eight women and four men deliberated six hours Tuesday, then returned a verdict convicting Ysaac C. (Smiley) Herrera of burglary. Herrera, 19-year-old Klamath Falls youth, had been accused of breaking into the home of Albert E. Crank, 2130 Vine Street, the night of Sept. 15 with the intent of committing assault and battery. Ten of the 12 jurors agreed on the guilty verdict which was announced at 11:30 p.m. by foreman Paul W. Duffy of Klamath Falls. The trial lasted only two days. Herrera admitted breaking into the house but said the reason was to get evidence to use against his ex-wife, Dolores Marie Tracy, 29, Herrera said he wanted to have their divorce decree modified so that he could have the right to see their two small daughters. Miss Tracy testified that she was in the house with Crank when Herrera came in with a 17-year-old youth. She said she didn't allow Herrera to see the children because "he always causes trouble." Judge David R. Vandenberg will sentence Herrera Friday morning.

Man Caught With Food

A transient from Texas was arrested by city police early Saturday morning for being in possession of some food that had been reported stolen from the Dog House Drive-In, 1515 South Sixth Street. A bakery truck driver, Louis Borgelli, making his morning rounds, told police a window had been broken at the drive-in. Police checked and found the place had been entered by someone who stole a red plastic tray, some chicken, cheese, hamburger, ham and hamburger buns. Police went to a nearby "hobo jungle" where they found T. W. Woods, 29, of Texas, with the food on the plastic tray. Woods said he had bought and paid for the food. He was booked at the city jail on a charge of being in possession of stolen property.

Missing Cars Reported Here

Two cars were reported missing Monday to city police, one of them thought to be stolen. Gerald D. Case, 4226 Lakeport Boulevard, told police his 1951 grey Ford sedan with Oregon license number 9A-3197 had been stolen Monday night from the vicinity of 1500 Gary Street. Virginia Pelletier, 4826 South Sixth Street, said she loaned her car to an 18-year-old girl Monday night in Tulelake and it wasn't returned. The car was a 1950 tan Ford. East Side Appliance Co., 132 South Seventh Street, reported the theft of a red hand truck from the back of a pickup truck over the weekend.

Aly Wassil Addresses Big Knife, Fork Crowd

By ANDY MERSHON. A human being spoke in Klamath Falls last night. More than 300 persons heard Aly Wassil address the Klamath Knife and Fork Club, largest crowd in the club's history. Wassil, one of a dying breed of professional philosophers, is a bearded Pakistani, and bears the distinction of once having been mistaken for Jesus Christ by a small child aboard an airplane. Wassil asked that his audience try to establish a relationship with him, not as East or West, but as "one human being to another." He quoted at length from the Hindu philosopher Shankara and from the teachings and works of the "western" Bible. Wassil's line of reasoning teaches that since modern-day civilization began in what we today term the Middle East, Rudyard Kipling's famous quote, which holds that "East is East and West is West and never the twain shall meet," is a falsehood. Similarity between the two cultures, East and West, Wassil says, begins with their religions. The world's three great faiths, Judaism, Christianity and Islam, all were born in this small geographic corner of the world. He said the entire area in which the great sagas of the Judeo-Christian Old Testament and the Islam Koran took place is about the size of "your own state of Oregon."

Algae Discussed By Klamath Compact Group

Algae, the elusive green growth in lakes and rivers, was the subject of an extensive discussion Tuesday at a special meeting of the Klamath River Compact Commission. Thirty five representatives of state and national health and indoor agencies heard a report from two Oregon State University biology professors, then discussed algae and decided to continue with a long-term study of the problem. The four-hour meeting was held in the Pelican Cafe in Klamath Falls. Professors Harry K. Finney and Roy A. Young, who studied algae for five years, reported on their findings. They said algae kills fish, can cause botulism and has an unpleasant odor. They said natural water conditions are difficult to reproduce in the laboratory. Oregon State University facilities were offered to the commission, which decided to meet with experts in the algae field and arrive at an approach to the problem. It was also decided that a long-term study was better than a crash program. Commission members are Kenneth N. Phillips, federal representative; Lewis A. Stanley, state of Oregon engineer, and William E. Warne, state of California director of water resources. R. C. Price represented Warne at the meeting. A. E. Kuiper of Sacramento is commission executive director. Kuiper said algae is present in many bodies of water in the Klamath Basin besides the Klamath River, including Upper Klamath Lake, Lost River, Gerber Reservoir, Malone Reservoir and the Link River. Kuiper said the Iron Gate Reservoir will be helpful in algae study. "We must approach the problem with caution," Kuiper warned. "Some fast solutions such as copper sulphate would kill the algae but would also kill everything else." He said the states of Oregon and California would work with the compact commission to develop a lasting solution. He added that this might take several years. Unusual conditions and occurrences in the area delay a permanent solution, Kuiper said. He labeled the Klamath River a "backward stream." Most rivers originate in the mountains and flow to the ocean, Kuiper said, but the Klamath River originates in flat lands, flows into the mountains and then to the ocean. Upper Klamath Lake also acted unusually this year, he continued, because the algae content was low and died much earlier than is normal.

Lumber Market Upswing Predicted By Ullman

Congressman Al Ullman, visiting here today, predicted an early upswing in the lumber market. "As a result of speedy Congressional enactment of President Kennedy's economic program, the nation is moving out of this recession faster than any other in recent times. The construction industry should get into high-gear next year." Ullman is making a swing through the Second District following adjournment of Congress two weeks ago. While here he spoke at Klamath Union High School and Oregon Technical Institute, and conferred with forest service officials and others. Ullman referred to the Housing Bill as "the most comprehensive housing legislation in the history of the country." He predicted that "we will feel its effect the next building season." "This new construction will have a direct effect on the price of lumber, and will be of great benefit to Oregon's economy." Referring to other actions of Congress, Ullman stated, "We enacted more major legislation for the Kennedy Administration than has been enacted for any new president in history."

Dale Wood Rites Set

MALIN - Funeral services will be held at the Malin Presbyterian Church at 1 p.m. Thursday for Orville Dale Wood Jr., 40, who was killed in an electrical accident at Mesa, Wash., Sunday, Oct. 8. Mr. Wood was born in Stanton, Neb., and came here in 1938. He left here to homestead in Arizona, but returned to this area in 1958. A graduate of Malin High School in 1938, Mr. Wood attended Arizona Agricultural College for three years. He had purchased a ranch in Washington early this year, and the family had moved to Mesa. Reports say he was handling a sprinkler tube when it contacted a live wire. No additional details were available. He is survived by his wife, Pearl, and three children, Charles, 14, Connie, 12, and Debbie, 9; two sisters, Mrs. Martin Lenhardt, Leucadia, Calif., and Mrs. Charles Duncan, Malin; mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. Orville Wood, Malin. Ward's Funeral Home is in charge of arrangements. Rev. Ethan Whitman, Malin, will preside at the service.

Ex-Preacher Pleads Guilt

A former minister pleaded guilty to a charge of drunk driving Monday afternoon in district court. James H. Cearley, 47, of Talent (near Medford), will be sentenced Wednesday morning by Judge Hal F. Coe. Cearley told state police officers that he was once a minister in Texas. Cearley was arrested early Sunday morning on South Sixth Street after several passing motorists reported a car driving in an erratic manner. State police said Cearley's speech was slurred and he was unsteady on his feet.

Mother's Death Calls Doctor

Dr. and Mrs. Mark Kochevar are in Pueblo, Colo., for the funeral of his mother, Mrs. Mark Kochevar, who died Oct. 8 following surgery earlier in the week. Funeral services will be Thursday morning in Pueblo under the direction of T. G. McCarthy Funeral Home. Dr. and Mrs. Kochevar, who were called to Pueblo previous to the death, will return to Klamath Falls next week.

Job's Daughters Sell Toffees

Attractively packaged butter toffees are now being sold by the Henley Bethel 51, Order of Job's Daughters. Two teams of girls are competing in the treasury project. The toffees are made in Oregon especially by Jobies sales, according to the members. This is the group's only money-making project for the fall season.
