Funds, Ethics, Bossism Topics Of New York Mayoralty Debates

NEW YORK (AP)—The two major party candidates for mayor clashed over political ethics, bossism, fund-raising practices and other issues as they debated on television Tuesday night.

Democratic Mayor Robert F. Wagner and State Atty. Gen. Louis J. Lefkowitz, his Republican opponent, appeared for an hour on a program similar to the Kennedy-Nixon debates in last year's presidential campaign.

The public service program was carried by station WPIX, owned by the New York Daily News. The candidates replied to questions asked by three newspapermen, commented on each other's replies and delivered summaries at the end.

Wagner, seeking a third four-year term, said Lefkowitz is a "boss-picked candidate."

Lefkowitz, who has the active support of Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller and other GOP leaders, declared he has acted without interference during five years as the state's top law officer and would continue to do so if elected mayor.

Wagner said bossism has been eliminated in the Democratic party here since the Sept. 7 primary election in which he and his running mates won nomination over a ticket backed by the city's Democratic leaders.

Lefkowitz blasted the recent Democratic luncheon at which $25,000 was pledged to Wagner's campaign fund. Two score men at the luncheon—including a number of real estate men and builders doing business with the city—answered a roll call and made their pledges.

Wagner, who attended the GOP breakfast "to see if the bankers who are responsible for financing the Republican party and therefore own the Republican party" made campaign contributions.

Among those at the breakfast were former President Dwight D. Eisenhower, Lefkowitz and Rockefeller.

Lefkowitz said in the debate that the breakfast was for 250 campaign workers, and no funds were raised.

Lefkowitz denounced crime conditions in the city. Wagner replied that every large city in the world has similar law enforcement problems.

He claimed New York City's record is good in comparison with other major American cities.

Lefkowitz said Wagner is asking for four more years at city hall in the Nov. 7 election "to clean up the mess he made in eight years."

Wagner said he and his aides have taken the lead in uncovering wrongdoing in the city administration and the administration would never "sweep anything under the rug."

Shortly before the debate, city Republican leaders announced that Eisenhower will throw his influence into the campaign by speaking at a GOP dinner at the Coliseum Oct. 24.

Dog Named Beneficiary

MINEOLA, N.Y. (AP)—Audrey Fischman testified in Nassau Supreme Court Wednesday that her husband once took out a $100,000 airplane insurance policy and named the beneficiary as Sandy Fischman—the family dog.

Mrs. Fischman is seeking a separation from her husband.
