Mountain Slides Hike Canyon Freeway Costs

DUNSMUIR, Calif. (AP)—Highway engineers, racing against the oncoming rains of winter, are confounded by a moving mountain.

They are the men who are building a six-mile segment of U. S. 99, a new four-lane divided highway in the Sacramento River canyon between Redding and Dunsmuir.

The river rushes between narrow canyon walls after pouring from glacial springs near Dunsmuir.

The engineers realized they were confronted with a mammoth task when they started the job of squeezing four lanes of pavement into this sheer canyon.

Then they encountered the moving mountain about nine miles south of Dunsmuir. An unstable section of earth and rock is making it necessary to remove—above original estimates—about 400,000 cubic yards of soil and rock.

When State-Hall-Hamilton of Portland, contractors on the section between Shotgun Creek and Castella, started work in June, 1960, engineers figured it would cost $1.25 million a mile.

Almost at once, heavy equipment operators began to run into soil and rock that just wouldn't stay put. To date the original estimated cost of the six miles has been revised upward to $8.78 million.

Herb Miles, district engineer for the California Division of Highways at Redding, says that moving the 400,000 additional cubic yards of rock and soil, together with additional clearing, possible required drainage and other related work, may run the extra cost on this one cut up to $550,000.

The state now is looking into the possibility of changing the highway alignment to move the

Movie Ban Case Lost

PORTLAND (AP)—The state today lost an attempt to ban the controversial film, "The Lovers."

Circuit Judge Charles W. Redding dismissed indictments against the manager and projectionist of the theater where the movie was playing.

They were arrested Friday in a mammoth raid by law officials.

Redding indicated that he believed the film should be banned. But he said he had to follow the letter of the state obscenity law. The law—passed by the last legislature—states it is a crime to provide obscene matter. Judge Redding said that provide did not mean exhibit and that he therefore could not permit the indictments to stand.

State Sen. Carl Francis, R-Dayton, testified for the state. He said that it was not the intent of the legislature to exempt motion pictures from the obscenity law.

Redding said he hoped the district attorney would find some other way to ban the film.

Dist. Atty. Julian Herdon said the case would be appealed to the state Supreme Court.

Mayor Terry Schruink of Portland, whose denunciations had started the attempt to ban the film, expressed disappointment.

"I hoped that under this new state statute, we could get away from technicalities and speak directly to the issues—so we would know whether the police department, the district attorney and the sheriff have a responsibility, the right and the authority to control lewd and obscene material. If they don't have, the people should know," Schruink said.

Fallout Den Probe Opens

PORTLAND (AP)—A survey of community fallout shelters in the five Pacific Northwest states is being conducted by the Army Engineers and the Navy Bureau of Yards and Docks.

This was disclosed today by the North Pacific Division of the Army Engineers, which will supervise the survey.

This survey is in line with President Kennedy's new program to earmark shelter space for 50 million Americans in large buildings in every city and town.

The Northwest and Alaskan Divisions of the Navy Bureau of Yards and Docks and the Seattle, Portland, Wash. and Alaska Divisions of the Army Engineers will make the regional field survey.
